

Citizens claiming railroad victory

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

After battling with the railroad, the citizens of Romulus have prevailed.

Since June, a number of Romulus residents have protested the proposed development of a railroad storage facility between Eureka and Pennsylvania roads along the railroad line. The construction was proposed by Total Distribution Inc., a subsidiary of CSX Railway Systems.

Homeowners expressed concern about the destruction of wetlands in the development area and lengthy traffic blockage the additional trains would create at the east/west railroad crossing in town.

The development was halted temporarily in October by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) after numerous letters, a petition and citizen outcry.

"I'm overjoyed that we came through," said one citizen who asked to remain anonymous. "As citizens and as taxpayers you have to stick together," the resident said.

The railroad must meet three DNR requirements by April 1, 1989 in order to continue development.

First, a wetlands area of equal or better habitat than the one currently on the development site must be established. The DNR rejected the previous railroad proposal for wetland mitigation.

Next, remedies for the lengthy closing of crossings must be provided. Recommended was a limit on the amount of time crossings may remain closed or construction of road overpasses.

Finally, the railroad must prove alternative development locations are unavailable.

"We have to look into all three points," said Tom Tipi, a representative for CSX. He said the railroad plans to work out the issues presented by the DNR, but an alternative sight has not been found.

"We definitely want that location," Tipi said. "We have no place else to go."

He added that some CSX officials question the authority of the DNR to intervene on the subject of crossing closure.

If CSX cannot meet the DNR requirements by April it will be required to replace wetlands it has already destroyed.

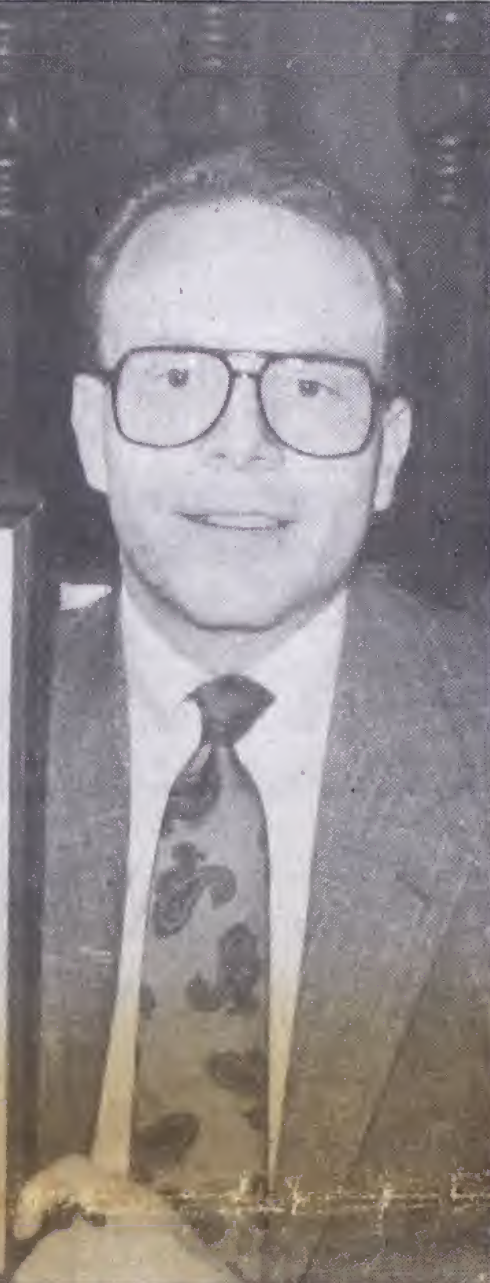

Meanwhile, residents who fought against a seemingly infallible railroad and won still revel in satisfaction.

William Wadsworth, a Romulus city council member, lives on Barth near the proposed development site. He was among the first to protest the effects such a project would have on his community.

"The trains were going to ruin our town," said Wadsworth. He emphasized the frustration he felt as a tax-paying citizen opposing a seemingly infallible railroad.

Wadsworth stressed that his efforts would not have mattered without the protests of other residents. "If it wasn't for them we wouldn't have gotten to first base," he said.

"It's just great," said Fred Ray Sr., who was also actively protesting the development. "We like it just the way it is."

Art appreciation

Local artists are appreciating the display of their works in local businesses this year, including this pencil-chalk drawing by former Romulus high school student Leroy Walton. The drawing has been on display at the Romulus Big Boy restaurant for one year as part of the "Art in the Workplace" program sponsored by the Romulus Arts Council. Eleven other student creations have been displayed in Romulus businesses this year. "Art in the Workplace" strives to encourage student creativity and community involvement in fresh, new art work, according to John Percy (above), Arts Council chairman. The participating students and businesses for this and the upcoming season were honored at a reception hosted by the Romulus Art Council yesterday at the Holiday Inn-Metro Airport. $4 million seized, 9 are arrested in airport drug bust

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

At least $4 million in cash was confiscated by the Detroit Drug Enforcement Authority (DEA) at the Romulus Sheridan Inn Friday night in a drug raid which followed 36 hours of surveillance.

Nine people were arrested. They are believed to be part of a drug ring wanted by law enforcement agencies throughout the United States. Officials of the DEA said members of the drug ring are wanted in connection with the seizure of $7 million in Los Angeles and the seizure of 1,200 pounds of cocaine in St. Louis.

Although no narcotics were discovered during the raid this weekend, several search warrants have been issued throughout the country to track the drugs.

The surveillance at the airport hotel began when the DEA received an anonymous tip. The person said a California woman suspected to be part of the drug ring was going to the Holiday Inn-Detroit Metro Airport to wait for "a pick-up," said DEA special agent Patricia Naughton.

Agents conducted the watch with the help of officers from the Romulus Police Department, the Wayne County Sheriff's Department, the Detroit Police, the Michigan State Police and the U.S. Customs and U.S. Department of Immigration and Naturalization.

Wire-tapping was among the methods used to keep tabs on the suspects, Naughton said.

Officials of the DEA said members of the drug ring are wanted in connection with the seizure of $7 million in Los Angeles and the seizure of 1,200 pounds of cocaine in St. Louis.

Sunday night, members of the observation team detected three men carrying large cartons into the Sheridan Inn. One of the men reportedly dropped a carton revealing cash inside.

A search warrant for the men's hotel room was immediately issued. According to a representative from the Romulus Police Department, the arresting officers found seven additional cartons, three-by-three feet, crammed with cash in the hotel room.

The exact amount confiscated has not been determined, but it amounts to at least $4 million, said Naughton. There may be as much as $8 million.

Of the nine suspects arrested, six are Colombian, one is Cuban and two are from the Detroit area. The local men charged are Joseph Gough and Michael Robinson.

The immigration status of the Colombian and Cuban suspects remains under investigation.

The nine suspects were arraigned by U.S. Magistrate Virginia Morgan yesterday afternoon.

Councilman's request sparks controversy

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

A seemingly simple procedure which took place during a city council meeting last Monday has sparked controversy within the city of Romulus.

The dispute stems from a request by Mayor Beverly McAnally to the council asking permission for City Assessor Matthew Raftary to destroy obsolete personal property statements.

Some of the statements date back as far as 15 years. The city required to keep the documents only one year.

When the issue was raised Councilman Jimmie Raspberry requested to review the documents before voting. He said he wanted to make sure he knew exactly what was to be destroyed before he voted on the matter.

Raspberry added he did not want to see a "Watergate" situation on a city level.

The request to see the forms led the editor of The Romulus News to threaten Raspberry with a cease and desist order. Raspberry was accused of violating the privacy of Romulus business owners by requesting to see confidential information.

The mayor, however, did comply with Raspberry's request and arranged for the forms to be brought to council chambers in several large boxes.

Raspberry looked at one document from each of the boxes to make sure the forms were indeed obsolete tax forms. Raftary remained present throughout the process.

David Atkins, editor and publisher of The Romulus News, said Thursday that because of the manner Raspberry checked the forms, he has been advised to stop his pursuit of a cease and desist order.

Raspberry maintains that as an elected official of Romulus, he has an obligation to be totally aware of all business brought before the city council for action.

"I merely asked to see the type of records we were destroying," he said. "I think I exercised good judgement."

Dispute over Raspberry's request continues.

"I'm never surprised at the inappropriateness of some of Councilman Raspberry's requests," said McAnally. She questions his referral to the Nixon Administration.

"I would think my actions would indicate there is no cover up," she added.

In a letter to the mayor, Raspberry explained his actions further. "I feel very strongly that should future litigation arise pertaining to any of these records, I could go into court with a clear understanding of just what was destroyed and could positively testify to the fact."

He added that he had no ulterior motives for requesting to review the documents.

'Cable system needs community involvement'

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

Live coverage of community and school events is one of the options under consideration by the Romulus Cable Commission, but more community support is needed.

The commission, which meets monthly, consists of community members and representatives of Omnicom, owner of the city cable system. A major function of the commission is to address needs of Romulus cable subscribers and promote community involvement with the system.

Debbie Dick, committee member and director of the Romulus recreation center, said she would like to see more citizens participate with cable productions. Currently, six residents, including Dick, have been trained to use cable equipment. She said most of those people find covering local events and balancing the responsibilities of their regular jobs difficult.

She hopes more residents will look into the three-month cable course offered by Omnicom. Those people would be able to film community events, and more importantly, program events for Channel 40.

Along with local volunteers, a part-time employee will be necessary to handle several hours of programming on the channel. This position will become increasingly important as the channel covers more events.

Among the community events considered for coverage during the November commission meeting were city council meetings, Dick said. The commission is looking at several options for coverage.

One possible method would be a fixed camera on the ceiling. Meetings would not be on tape for future viewing, but the coverage would be live.

Another option would be taping meetings with a camera crew and showing them at scheduled times. The tapes would probably be previewed and edited.

Dick said the commission will study a number of options and choose one at the December meeting. Funds are available for the coverage, Dick added, and a major factor will be availability of personnel.

The council coverage may begin this winter, she said.

Although Channel 40 will concentrate on achieving complete coverage of community and school events for now, once it is fully utilized a second city channel may be started, said Dick. The additional channel would be for local events such as church functions, she said.

For now, Dick emphasized, the cable channel needs more residents to participate.

Jail jitters: Westland no longer top site for county facility

By BARBARA ALBERT
ANP Staff Writer

A site for the new Wayne County jail still hasn't been selected, but the Eloise property in Westland is no longer considered a prime target.

Mike Duggan, assistant to Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara, said there are now three other sites favored more than the Eloise property. "Eloise remains a backup site if all else fails," Duggan said. Hamtramck is currently a likely spot for the jail, he said. "The people in Hamtramck really want it," Duggan said. County officials have made several trips to the city to discuss the matter with officials there. Duggan would not release the names of other possible locations until officials of prospective cities had been approached. Bids from developers have been scrutinized by McNamara's staff for the past few weeks. Duggan said the list should be narrowed down to three possible locations next week. The developers were asked to submit recommendations for a possible site with their bids. It was not a requirement, but, Duggan said, those developers who suggested property would be at an advantage. "Two out of the seven submitting bids actually had options of property for the facility," Duggan said.

Ecorse and Westland were once the two top cities considered as a jail site when the search for property first began. It is not known if Ecorse remains in the running for the jail. Westland officials expressed their dismay at locating the jail on the Eloise property. City officials have plans to develop the property, home of the former county poorhouse, into an industrial and office complex. The 840-bed prison is to be built with money from a 1-mill tax levy approved by voters in the primary. The prison is expected to house misdemeanants and pre-trial felons. Criteria for a jail site included proximity to highways or to downtown court buildings and ease with which the land could be developed.

Assessments planned for drains

Assessments for the repair and maintenance of drains throughout Wayne County are slated to be levied following a Nov. 29 public review. The hearing will be conducted between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. at the Wayne County Department of Public Services, 415 Clifford St., Detroit. In addition to charges levied at large to Wayne County and the cities and townships served by the drains, owners of parcels of land within these districts are subject to assessment for the expenses incurred in the drain repair and maintenance projects. The public review has been slated to allow property owners in the special assessment districts to voice their views, according to a DPS spokesman. Assessments are slated to be levied against property owners in the following western Wayne County areas:

- Bunton District, Belleville and Van Buren Township;
- Crocker District, Romulus;
- Delaney and Branch, Romulus and Van Buren Township;
- North Branch of Ecorse Creek, Inkster, Romulus and Westland;
- Freeman, Romulus;
- Martin and extension; Sumpter Township, Huron Township;
- Northrup, Sumpter Township;
- Number Three, Sumpter Township;
- Spink, Sumpter Township;
- Strong, Van Buren Township;
- Townline, Huron Township, Sumpter Township;

- Vealy, Romulus;
- Willow Creek, Canton Township, Plymouth Township, Westland;
- Wilson, Westland, and Wright, Westland.

In addition, assessment districts have been established for the following Huron Township areas: Ash, Belden Tile, Cole, Hosmer and Vandicar. Residents who need additional information about their drainage districts may contact the department of public works in their city or township or the Wayne County DPS.

As we gather around the dinner table this Thanksgiving, there will be much we can be grateful for. Perhaps for most families, it will be the abundance of the feast. For others, it may be the presence of a dear one who has been far away. Whatever the blessing, it is only right to praise God for it. But, His blessings don't come just on Thanksgiving Day. They are there for us to count, day after day. We invite you to come to your house of worship.

Blackout affects city of Romulus

Businesses and homes throughout Belleville and parts of Van Buren Township and Romulus were plunged into darkness on Monday afternoon following a power failure.

A municipal employee reported that workers "were huddled in the lobby area" of the city hall after the power failure because many of the interior offices have no windows. In addition, the employee said, because "everything is on the computer, there's nothing we can do."

City workers were told at noon that it would be more than three hours before power could be restored.

Van Buren Township police said all of the area south of Tyler Road and East of Elwell Road appeared to be affected by the blackout.

Promoted: 1st female police sergeant ready

Romulus resident Cora Semrau became the first female police sergeant in the city Thursday. She has been with the police force for six years. ANP photo by Ann Grimes/staff photographer

Joining a staff as one of four policewomen in a station can be a challenge.

Cora Semrau has now gone one step further. Thursday, she was sworn in as the first female sergeant on the Romulus police force.

Semrau said police work has interested her since her junior year in high school. A police officer who spent time counseling students in her Allen Park school arranged for Semrau to spend a weekend at a state police academy.

After that experience she was hooked and she focused the rest of her educational career toward police work. Semrau earned an associates degree in criminal justice at Henry Ford Community College and pursued a bachelor of science at Ferris State University.

Her choice of careers startled her mother a little at first, said Semrau, but now her whole family is supportive, including her husband of four months.

Semrau spent nearly six years as a patrol officer with the Romulus police. In July she was assigned to a training position with the detective bureau and became eligible for a promotional exam in the fall.

Semrau took the two-part exam and finished with the highest score of all those taking the test. The exam consisted of a two-hour written portion with more than 100 questions and an oral portion.

Semrau explained that applicants also earn points for previous evaluations as an officer, education after high school and residency.

— Cora Semrau

day along with Brian Cozzaglio and Ronald Huggins, Semrau said she looks forward to taking the new positions, but expects the privilege of being the first female sergeant to be a challenge in itself.

Semrau said she has spent the past six years developing the trust and confidence of the other officers. "I've basically proven myself." Now, she added, officers may wonder how she will perform as a supervisor.

Each of the new sergeants will be on probation for the next six months and will be rotated through all three shifts. "We will be learning and acting in that position," she said.

The three sergeants will probably become shift leaders, based inside the station. Their presence will allow the other sergeants to provide more on-the-road supervision.

When inside the station, a sergeant answers the telephone and police radio, operates the Law Enforcement Information Network (LEIN) computer system and the in-house computer, and supervises the dispatchers, Semrau said. The position also entails supervision of cadets and all officers in the building. The sergeant must also monitor the lock-up facilities, the condition of prisoners and all equipment in the building, she said.

As a supervisor, Semrau said, a sergeant is not meant to be a babysitter. She said the officers know their jobs. However, a sergeant should always know what the officers are doing and be available if needed.

"You have to stay on top of what they're doing... A lot of the time they just need advice," said Semrau.

The time spent with officers and people in the community is important to Semrau. She said the family atmosphere of the station is one of her favorite aspects of police work.

Semrau also enjoys being needed. "Romulus is the kind of community I always wanted to work for," she said. "Romulus has everything. You can always find something to do."

Semrau said she began working for the Romulus police when the force was only one year old and the growth has been tremendous.

Although Semrau has not mapped out her long-term plans in police work, she does have one general goal.

"I want to walk away when I retire and be able to say I did the very best I could do," she said.

Halecreek mourns loss of longtime co-worker

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

A well-loved learning center paraprofessional at Halecreek Elementary School died last Tuesday.

Rita Bradley, who began her work with remedial students at Halecreek in 1976, died of heart failure due to complications. She had a history of heart problems.

Bradley began her career in 1972 at the old Harrison Elementary School. After Har-ison closed in 1976 she went to the new Halecreek school. She was transferred to Hayti school in 1979 and returned to Halecreek in 1986.

Her peers refer to Bradley with love and respect. They said she cared deeply for her students and was loved by them in return.

"She was a loving, caring person," said co-worker Toni Dorenzo. "She was also a fantastic friend."

Bradley was a mother of two, Michelle, 29, and Michael, 32.

City community center costs must be minimal

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

The challenges of building a community center were discussed Monday at a planning meeting for the proposed project.

Debbie Dick, director of recreation for Romulus, said the Community Center Planning Committee met with a representative from Canton Township who discussed the campaign for a recreation center in his community.

Money is always a big issue with this kind of project, according to the speaker.

He suggested that the committee members identify residents who feel positively about the project. Those people could then be targeted to promote the idea to others.

One problem encountered in Canton Township was a mis-conceived idea that the recreation center would be exclusive, similar to a private gym.

"Our main goal is to bring recreation to this facility," said Dick. "Whatever we do with the building we'll make sure people know it's affordable."

Another challenge brought up was a site for the proposed building. Committee members had planned to use a location near Romulus City Hall. Now they are concerned that the site may be too small. Alternative locations will be discussed at the next planning meeting.

Dick said the meeting staged this week was more informational than anything else. "Nothing concrete was decided," she said.

However, she said, the next meeting may be a decisive one in the future of a community center.

At that meeting, committee members plan to establish a timetable for action. They will decide when the community center will be put on the ballot and what they will do until that time.

Dick said she hopes all members of the Romulus school board attend so the joint project of a swimming pool for the center and Romulus schools can be discussed.

The committee will not meet in December because of the holidays.

"In January we'll really try to bring more people," she said. Average attendance has been between 25 and 45 people.

Christmas

Students in the adult education program in the Romulus Community School are ready for Christmas with their handmade works of art. A part of the arts and crafts program, the students are making a variety of craft items for their own enjoyment. Some of the masterpieces produced have included a doll by Amy McIntyre (above), who plans to keep the creation for herself. Other crafted items include pigs in a basket, sweatshirts, embroidery and Christmas decorations. The class meet from 1 to 3 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Fridays. Solid waste woes

Area leaders react to long-range county plan

Before the five-year update to the county waste management plan is adopted, communities in western Wayne County want their input included.

General comments on the update to the Wayne County Solid Waste Management Plan were presented at the Nov. 10 public hearing in Romulus and expanded in a report to the members of the Conference of Western Wayne on Nov. 18.

A major concern expressed by the CWW is that the waste reduction goal is meaningless if it does not include the reduction of commercial and industrial solid waste in addition to residential wastes.

The plan calls for the reduction of the residential solid waste stream by 75 percent. Because residential wastes only account for 40 percent of the total waste stream, the remaining 60 percent or more of industrial and commercial wastes will be untouched by the reduction plan, the CWW re-

"We believe that local units can extend the reduction goal to commercial and industrial waste generators by development and enforcement of appropriate ordinances. Many of our communities currently license and regulate hauler of commercial waste - such licenses can be conditioned on the hauler developing and implementing waste reduction plans," according to the memorandum issued by the CWW.

In his presentation to the 17-community CWW, Rob van Ravenswaay expressed concern that the "hierarchy of policy options is not being implemented." The state solid waste policy calls for reuse, recycling, composting and then incineration with the ashes and uncombustible residuals being placed in landfills, van Ravenswaay said. However, the implementation committee has placed incineration on the same level as recycling and composting, he said.

The CWW rejected the premise of the update that communities will be more likely to host landfills if that means they will not be required to meet waste reduction goals. The CWW survey found that the communities most likely to host landfills have no interest in being exempted from the reduction goal. Instead, they favor doing as much as possible to limit the need for landfills by increasing the amount of recycling, composting and incineration and by extending waste reduction requirements beyond the residential sector.

Van Ravenswaay noted that Van Buren Township and Huron Township - both likely sites for landfills - have shown no interest in avoiding waste reduction programs.

In his report, van Ravenswaay said recycling and composting can, and should, be implemented on a multi-community basis using centralized facilities. He noted that a site separation facility and composting operations will be most efficient if they handle the waste from several communities.

Recycling programs already are under way in several CWW communities. For example, the city of Wayne collects newspapers at curbside during the first pickup each month.

The CWW members expressed opposition to both the emergency siting procedure and the plan to site several landfills "if the siting is done by the existing implementation committee."

"We have a fundamental problem with the implementation committee composition," the CWW report stated. "CWW has previously commented on the update and specifically called for reconstitution of the implementation committee to be representative of elected officials. We believe a reconstituted committee - accountable to the people - will be able to credibly site landfills. Otherwise, local resistance will stiffen."

The current committee membership includes four representatives of the solid waste industry - Roy Kellas, Waste Management; Tom Handyside, City Sand; Mike Brinker, Greater Detroit Resource Recovery Authority, and Robert Ryan, Best Way.

Three seats are currently vacant, two are filled by representatives of environmental groups, one represents county government, one represents city government, one represents regional planners and two represent the general public.

"At minimum, we believe a solid majority of the committee should be local elected officials," the CWW report stated.

"The current committee is too reliant on industry," said Westland Mayor Charles Griffin, who serves as CWW chairman. "We do not have a lot of faith in the current committee."

The number of representatives from the solid waste industry on the siting committee "presents, at a minimum, impropriety," according to van Ravenswaay.

The CWW report also noted that siting landfills in unwilling host communities "is a sensitive matter, best handled by a smaller group which includes representation from the intended host community and the reconstituted implementation committee." The role of the siting committee, the report continued, would be to hammer out a reasonable mitigation agreement for a needed landfill in an otherwise reasonable site which lacks a mitigation agreement with the host community.

Go ahead...tie one on!

MADD and Michigan law enforcement agencies want you to "tie one on" this holiday season. But let's change the meaning. Tie a bright red ribbon on your door handle, antenna or outside mirror. Let your car serve as a visual sign that you want to stop drunk driving in Michigan.

1 community withdraws from hospital authority

By THOMAS M. VARCIE
ANP Staff Writer

Ypsilanti Township has reportedly been the first community in the Peoples Community Hospital Authority to withdraw membership from the organization, as part of the PCHA restructuring.

Member communities of the PCHA were notified Oct. 26 that they had 60 days to withdraw or remain a member of the hospital authority. Board members of the PCHA voted Oct. 26 to reorganize as a private, nonprofit corporation.

Board members at the October PCHA board meeting approved the transfer of assets, by a vote of 28-5, to United Care Inc., the new private, nonprofit corporation. Assets of the hospital authority can be transferred between now and the first part of January. The monies transferred are to be used specifically for health-care purposes.

Members of the Ypsilanti Township council have adopted a resolution withdrawing membership from the authority.

"We are going to withdraw from the PCHA because it is going private, and we liked it as a public organization," said Joyce Kuhn, assistant to the Ypsilanti Township supervisor. "We don't desire to take the taxes and funnel them into a private enterprise."

The next step for the township, according to Maureen Camps, spokeswoman for PCHA, will be to bring the resolution before the PCHA board. The board will either approve or reject the request.

To date, no other communities have withdrawn from PCHA, Camps said, but time remains for communities to consider that option.

"They have some time to decide, and some of the communities might want to have some study sessions. They had 60 days to respond," Camps said. "A special meeting would probably be called in early January if there are any communities wishing to withdraw."

Currently, 24 member PCHA communities are levied .2 mill a year. The organization was allowed to levy up to .4 mill annually. Because United Care, the new health-care group, is a private agency, the tax levy will be eliminated.

United Care also will not be subject to legal provisions affecting public bodies, such as open meetings.

In addition, anyone will be eligible to use United Care facilities, Camps said. Currently, residents of non-PCHA communities are charged added fees for using the hospital facilities.

The PCHA owns and operates five hospitals in western Wayne County and Downriver, including Ann Arbor Hospital, in Wayne; Beyer Memorial, Ypsilanti; Heritage, Taylor; Outer Drive, Lincoln Park; Seaway, Trenton; and ambulatory care centers in Brownstown Township, Livonia and Westland.

Future of surplus food giveaways is uncertain

By JIM RINK
ANP Staff Writer

Western Wayne County residents looking forward to a monthly allocation of surplus food from the federal government may be disappointed to learn that cheese will no longer be an item on the menu.

In fact, the allocations have been stretched out to once every other month and will feature only three food items: butter, flour and cornmeal.

Established in 1982, the Temporary Emergency Food Assistance Program was never intended to last as long as it has, according to some government officials.

A recent Congressional appropriation of $126 million will keep the program floating another two years. The food distributed as a result of the program will no longer be surplus, but purchased on a wholesale basis.

"This program started in the depths of the recession, in late 1982," said Al Hatcher, director of Wayne Metro Community Services, a distribution center for the out-county area. "The government had all these commodities. They stored this stuff, paid storage charges, etc. A lot of people were out of work, unemployed. We got rid of all the surplus commodities."

The cheese that used to be surplus is now gone, Hatcher said, and the lack of that commodity has already had an effect on the number of people who come to collect the food.

"Because we're not getting the cheese, they're feeling like it's not worth their time to bother," Hatcher said.

Wayne Metro Community Services consists of four regions, according to Van Niece, public information officer. Regions 2 and 3 are located in Romulus, and service most of western Wayne County, including Redford, Dearborn, Dearborn Heights, Garden City, Plymouth Township, Livonia, Inkster, Northville Township, Westland and Canton Township.

The Romulus center is located at 35408 Beverly Road.

Local residents must qualify to receive surplus commodities. For more information on how to qualify and pre-register, call the Food Hot Line at 721-4470.

Phone bill is wrong number

An explanation about the monthly fee for the new emergency phone service apparently has raised more questions and concerns than it sought to answer.

The notice, which accompanied telephone bills in several metropolitan Detroit communities, read, "Under authority of Public Act 32, the County Board of Commissioners has authorized an emergency telephone charge to be added to your Michigan Bell telephone bill on a regular monthly basis. If you have any questions or concerns about this monthly emergency telephone charge, please contact the County Board of Commissioners."

Joseph Benyo, coordinator for the 17-community Conference of Western Wayne Enhanced 911 system, said, the notation had been sent to subscribers in Redford, Dearborn Heights and Dearborn in addition to those in the city of Detroit. However, he said, the majority of those covered in the CWW area did not receive the notation on their last telephone bill.

"The language was confusing," Benyo said. "The only part that the county had in establishing the service was the approval of the public act. Rather than instructing subscribers to contact the Wayne County Board of Commissioners with their questions, the note should have directed them to call their local emergency coordinators."

Benyo said he hopes that future notations will avoid directing the individual subscribers to the commissioners.

"We are continuing to meet with local representatives of Enhanced 911 and officials in all levels who are working on the project, so I am sure we will be able to work this out before the system is implemented in the CWW area," Benyo said.

A few calls regarding the notation have been logged in the office of County Commissioner Kay Beard, but the majority of concern has been listed among Detroit area subscribers.

Commissioner Jackie Currie, chairman of the Special Committee on Enhanced 911, said that the statement incorrectly implies that the county is responsible for the extra charge on the bills.

"In addition," she said, "people could read the statement and conclude that the county is benefiting financially, and nothing could be further from the truth. Michigan Bell is attributing to us something over which we have no responsibility and no control."

The commissioners have asked Michigan Bell to rephrase the message.

Belleville teacher lauded for efforts

Richard Dokas, a teacher at Belleville High School, was among 38 people honored as outstanding teachers by Mercy College of Detroit.

Honorees were selected by new students enrolling at Mercy. The students were asked to recommend teachers who played a special role in helping them with career and college choices.

Dokas was selected by Marcia Talicska, a graduate of Belleville High School. She is majoring in pre-med.

"His (Dokas') guidance and concern during my last year of high school and taking the time to listen and comfort each student made me choose him for this award," Talicska said.

This is the second year Mercy has honored outstanding teachers.

North students study outdoors

Several sixth-grade students at North Middle School in Belleville recently attended outdoor education classes at Camp Storier, near Jackson. In classes with unusual names such as "Creature Feature" and "Pond Encounter," students explored many different aspects of nature.

Some Belleville High School students served as cabin counselors.

Students of month honored at North

Several students at North Middle School in Belleville have been named as Vikings of the Month.

The students, according to grade level, are: sixth-graders Melanie Jacob, Sarah Hoeft, Aaron Randall and Kermit Ring; seventh-graders Delonaka Abraham, Valerie Cardinal, Jeremy Strouse and Robbie Bower; and eighth-graders Kim Hambright, Kendra Smith, Derrick Craig and Steve Harmon.

Tour breeds young 'Belleville Boosters'

By JOAN MARY DYER
Belleville City Editor

After a stroll through the downtown area and visits to 14 city businesses and services, students at Edgemont School have become "Belleville Boosters."

Seventy third-graders, their teachers and a group of parents toured downtown Belleville on Wednesday to obtain a first-hand look at the variety of services and activities offered in the city.

"Before we made the trip, the children didn't know much about the downtown area. They thought the city consisted of the fast-food restaurants on Belleville Road," said teacher Karen White-Twigg. "The walking tour of downtown was intended to give them a better idea of what is in the city, and it also has prompted them to start building a replica of Belleville in the classroom. We may even decorate the streets of the miniature town for Christmas."

Students in White-Twigg's class and in the classroom of Nancy Steiger will be including their experiences in journals they are writing, and also will be using their first-hand impressions of the city to make maps.

One of their stops was the Fourth Street office of The Enterprise, located in the old township hall, which is shared with the Belleville Area Chamber of Commerce and Adventure Travel.

Students learned the history of the 102-year-old publication from Enterprise Editor Joan Dyer and were told about the history of the building by Diane Ferguson. The pupils received information on submitting entries to the Belleville Booster contest, sponsored by the newspaper, and were invited to submit entries based on their city tour experiences. Following the tour, the pupils began writing their contest entries, according to White-Twigg and Steiger.

They also visited the National Bank of Detroit, Bloomfield Savings Bank, Belleville Hardware, Trojan Cleaners, Speedy Printing, Fruit Basket Delivery, Mr. Goofy's Car Wash, Belleville Library, Belleville Police Station, Belleville Fire Station and lunched at The Red Apple before returning to school.

"They were really surprised at all of the things they found in Belleville. The children kept saying, 'I didn't know this was in Belleville' when they encountered new things," White-Twigg said. "For example, they didn't know that T-shirts were printed in town and they loved watching the fruit baskets being made up. Some of them plan to make up some baskets on their own for Christmas gifts."

Best of all, reported the teachers, not one student lost interest during the tour. They were a little tired, perhaps, but not bored, the teachers agreed.

School powwow planned

By THOMAS M. VARCIE
ANP Staff Writer

Students at Edgemont Elementary School, in Belleville, have proven time travel is possible.

Students take a leap back to prehistoric time as they participate in Prehistoric Pow Wow. The event will involve 30 students in Marianne Chipkowski's first/second-grade split class. The students will act out American Indian dances, skits and activities, according to Kathy Niemann, a classroom helper.

"The students have learned songs and dances and have made all their clothing for the skits by hand," said Niemann. A similar activity was presented last year by Chipkowski's class.

The students will perform for students, families and teachers, she said.

For scenery, a teepee has been constructed in Chipkowski's classroom, large enough for approximately three students. In addition, every student will wear a hand-made costume.

"The students were asked to bring in natural foods and natural drinks. They will be making some of the foods that were customary at that time," she said.

Each student in the class has been given a different part to play. Jessica Niemann, of second grade, is an Indian dancer.

"I'm one of the dancers in the pow wow. I'm going to do Indian dances in front of the classes. We wear Indian costumes and made necklaces and headbands for this," she said. "I feel I learn a lot from this because it's fun. I want to do this all the years I'm here."

To prepare for the event, Kathy Niemann said the students were taught about the Indians and the prehistoric age. The project is the culmination of the unit, she added.

"She (the teacher) makes the unit really fun for the kids. They really love it and can hardly wait to get started," she said.

No jail in Westland is worthy of thanks

Wayne County officials have apparently decided to take their business elsewhere. And, for that, western Wayne County residents should be thankful. Very thankful.

County officials have all but eliminated Westland as a prime target for the site of the new Wayne County jail. Land owned by the county at the Eloise facility, Michigan Avenue and Merriman Road, was eyed as one of two sites for the new county jail, after county jail, after county voters Aug. 2 approved a special 1-mill tax increase to fund the project.

Now, however, officials from Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara's office say Westland will be only "a backup site if all else fails." Hamtramck is currently considered the prime target for the new jail.

We laud that decision but feel those searching for a jail site should scratch Westland from their list completely.

The controversy surrounding the location of the new jail need not be one for western Wayne County. Officials from Hamtramck and Ecorse have clearly welcomed the future jail to their communities. The two communities need such a facility to make "economic development" a part of the local vocabulary.

Westland officials, however, have voiced their adamant opposition to a jail within the city. Obviously, with a crane and bulldozer at almost every major intersection in the city, economic development need not come in the form of a jail in Westland - or in another community in this booming western Wayne County area.

We do not deny the critical need for the proposed 840-bed new prison - to house misdemeanants and pretrial felons - within Wayne County. Neither did the voters who agreed to finance the jail.

But we also see no logic to considering Westland - even as a backup - as a jail site when at least two other communities would welcome the facility with open arms.

Westland city officials have big plans for the land eyed for the county jail. Located only miles from Metro Airport, the Eloise land is clearly prime soil for commercial and industrial development.

A jail in Westland would needlessly "lock up" this land and prevent future development in the surrounding area. It would also needlessly deprive the communities that need the jail from some form of economic development.

We're again urging Wayne County officials to take their jail business elsewhere.

Check before the check

'Tis the season not only for thoughts of holiday giving but for scams for holiday taking.

Once again, telephone boiler-room solicitors are preying on the seasonal good will of area residents to make their pleas for fraudulent charities. Local police officials tell us that many of the scams involve requests for donations by solicitors who claim affiliation with area police groups.

The callers rely on the good reputation of the local law-enforcement agencies to lend credence to their requests but, in reality, have no connection with them - either in the fundraising efforts or in the distribution of the donations.

These scams produce widespread negative results. First, they bilk local residents of donations that primarily enrich the boiler-room operators. Second, they take dollars away from worthwhile local charities that benefit the people in the community.

Little can be done to eliminate the boiler-room tactics because many operate just within the letter of the law - donating a tiny fraction of their receipts to a legitimate charity, for example. Those who clearly operate outside of the law are "here today, gone tomorrow operations" which change names and locations when investigators close in on them.

Area residents, however, can help to curb these scams by investigating the soliciting agency before making a donation. Area police chiefs advise residents to ask telephone callers to identify the charity and to send information on the background and purposes of the organization before making a donation. One simple tactic, they say, is to inform callers that you will check them out with the local police agency and request that they call back after you have done so.

In 90 percent of the instances, according to the police chiefs, the solicitors will not call back because they are aware that a background check with local police officials will produce a negative report.

Above all, don't allow the takers to dampen your spirit of giving during the holiday season.

Community fired up about coaches

Editor's note: Because of the overwhelming number of letters to the editor received in reference to our Nov. 16 stories about the firing of the assistant football coaches - especially James Zoltowski Sr. - at Wayne Memorial High School, we are printing excerpts of as many letters as possible. What follows are portions of all letters received. Headlines have been omitted to save space.

I don't think that anyone would argue that the coaches fired were not fired due to their coaching performance. I know, as well as everyone else around the football program at Wayne High over the last few years, that Coach "Zol" was not especially popular with the administration for, of all reasons, winning.

I think Zol was found guilty of treating his players too much like men and not kids. I think that his players respected him because they were treated like they were adults, not children needing to be babysitted.

MARK MORTON
Wayne

Upon reading your article, I discovered that I had been fired as the head coach of Wayne Memorial Junior Varsity Football team. Needless to say, I was very upset with this news.

It would have been nice for Coach Howton or the administration to inform me about the coaching changes and offer some insights as to the reasons of the dismissal. I thank Howton and the administration for the opportunity that they gave me.

However, all the memories are now overshadowed, and I am left with a bad taste in my mouth about how I was dismissed, without being informed, without explanation.

DAVID H. KAITSCHUCK
Wayne

I am a junior linebacker at Wayne. Zol is the best coach I have ever had the pleasure of being coached by. I've been playing football for seven years, and I've yet to have a coach that didn't swear.

The reason for swearing is to inspire the athletes. In other words, it is used to "fire you up!"

Zol is the best. He is loved by parents, players and family. To be a respected coach, you must first be a respected friend. Zol is that and much, much more.

BRAD WELLMAN
Wayne

I feel if somebody should have been fired, it should have been, without a doubt, Coach Chuck Howton. He has done nothing for Wayne football or anyone who played for him.

Mr. Zoltowski was the greatest coach Wayne has ever seen or will ever see. Just look at how many players Howton has put into college football programs in his years of coaching.

MIKE HEARD
Wayne

"Zol" is not just another teacher or coach, he is a motivator. You look upon him for guidance. He is like a counselor to my friend and I, even though we don't attend Wayne Memorial anymore. We both graduated with the class of 1987.

Zol is a student's friend. He is there to help. He has a strong back, and nothing will stand in the way of him helping a student in need. People just don't recognize this as some of us students do. He will be back, doing "his thing" with the support of many.

I hope the students continuing at the high school will be afforded the opportunity to derive as many benefits from his coaching, teaching and counseling as we have.

RON WAY
KEN DROPIEWSKI
Westland

It has been stated that the coaches were fired to "bring back discipline and a winning tradition." I have an extremely hard time comprehending this, since, during the last three years, the junior-varsity record has been 17-1 for football, 44-1 for baseball.

I have heard the allegations that Coach Zoltowski used foul language and grabbed a student. I am not condoning this action, however, I want you to show me one coach who has never used foul language. Like it or not, it is part of athletics.

If you want to continue the winning tradition, maybe you should look at Coach Howton and his record. As a head coach, I think Howton should be expected to take his share of the responsibility. I don't see that happening.

MIKE D. HEARD

Wayne

I have had the pleasure of knowing Coach Zol since my son's sophomore year at Wayne Memorial. He has instilled in my son a strong sense of pride and dedication to the sport of football and all that it entails and of the need to be a team player in the game of life.

BARBARA BARNES

I am disappointed in your reporter's biased opinion. In your article (personal column) about the firing of Wayne Memorial football coaches Jim Zoltowski Sr. and Jr., your staff writer Terry Jacoby has said, in his report, "their football programs are not only far apart but headed in opposite directions."

This is a biased remark and an opinionated one. This is not the first time Wayne Memorial has gotten a raw deal from the Associated Newspapers.

I resent your reporter comparing our coaching to that of the Detroit Lions.

BRUCE MacDONALD
Wayne

I read the articles that Terry Jacoby wrote Nov. 16. The articles were very good. I honestly like writers who are not afraid to tell the truth.

Rumors are that you have been receiving a lot of hassle from these articles. I feel maybe the people who are giving Jacoby a hassle are afraid of the truth.

SANDRA KOPCAK
Westland

I am disappointed in your article concerning the future of the Wayne Memorial football team. The team and students at Wayne feel that a great loss has taken place but realize that all that is needed is a little more work and concentration to build the team back up to what they were before the loss of the coaches.

School reform: Educators not impressed by new plan

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

"Playing politics with the serious business of our kids' education."

That's how most of superintendents of schools in the area summed up Gov. Blanchard's latest package for school-finance reform.

Most also agreed that Blanchard's newest proposal falls far short of a goal to solve the inequities in the present system.

To end the apparent deadlock of school-finance reform between members of the state House of Representatives and the state Senate, Blanchard earlier this week proposed a 1 cent sales-tax increase and a residential property tax cut of 25 percent.

State lawmakers already have a package in committee that would hike the sales tax to 6 cents. To offset the increase, the lawmakers would offer $1.25 billion in property-tax relief.

The governor's proposal would also place a cap of 28 mills on the amount a school district could levy to taxpayers.

The state sales tax is currently set by the state Constitution at 4 cents, and any increase would have to be approved by the voters.

Dr. Gary Jackson, superintendent of Huron Schools, in New Boston, condemned the governor's recommendation and called it "nothing but a political power-play."

"In fact, because of the result of this power play, he (Blanchard) destroyed two years of hard work on the part of several concerned state legislators including, (Dan L.) DeGrow (R-Port Huron) and fellow Democrat Lynn Jondahl (Okemos), and I am not really sure if he really knows how incensed the educational community really is about all of this, in particular the in-formula school districts," Jackson said.

In-formula school districts are those that receive state funding, as opposed to out-of-formula districts, in which property and commercial tax base generate enough funds to finance the school district operations without state aid.

Dr. William M. Bedell, superintendent of the Romulus Community Schools, agreed.

"First of all, Blanchard's proposal doesn't generate enough money to deal with the question of equity fully. Two-thirds of the kids in the state are being provided an inadequate education by the current funding system. The governor's proposal won't put a dent into that problem.

"The real problem is both the governor and the legislative leadership are trying to give property-tax cuts primarily to industry and business under the guise of educational reform," Bedell said.

One reason for the call for school-finance reform is the inequity in the system. Some school districts, because of a wealthy tax base, spend up to $7,500 per student each year. Others must educate students with less than $3,000 per pupil.

Dr. John M. Hoben, superintendent of the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, also believes Blanchard has undercut the legislative process.

"And, in general, I am not amused by any of the so-called school-finance reform packages," Hoben said. "Basically, they do not address the equity issue among the school districts in our state."

State Rep. Lynn Owen (D-Ypsilanti) has mixed feelings about the governor's proposal.

"We have all been looking for property-tax relief," Owen said. "And, basically, that's what the governor's proposal does. However, it doesn't answer the question of how to eliminate the inequities in school finance, and that remains the major concern. If we can't solve that problem, it won't be approved by the voters."

State Rep. Gerald Law (R-Plymouth) said that "even if the lawmakers decided to go with the governor's proposal, it would be defeated by his district's voters."

"I don't think his proposal would be accepted by the voters that I represent," Law continued. "As far as I can see, it is really a tax increase. You can't deduct sales tax from your state or federal taxes, while property taxes are deductible."

State Rep. James Kosteva (D-Canton Township) would like to see more details of the governor's package before he draws any conclusions.

"I consider it premature to make a definitive decision without seeing critical details," Kosteva said. "The governor seems to have put together a proposal that could work, but it needs a lot of fine-tuning. It needs to include some form of tax-base sharing, or it will not solve the problems of closing the gap between high- and low-spending districts," Kosteva said.

Offense: These players score touchdowns

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

The way to win football games is to put TDs on the scoreboard.

And the 1988 Associated Newspapers' All-Area Offense has the players who can do just this - score.

With prolific scorers such as Robichaud's sensational sophomore Tyrone Wheatley, Belleville senior running back Virgil Chandler and Romulus's Aro Trinity, the All-Area backfield is one of the most explosive assembled here in recent years.

Two outstanding quarterbacks - Robichaud's Eric Thomas and New Boston Huron's Paul Hill - have been drafted to handle the tough QB assignments. Hill and Thomas have been tested in fire and forged outstanding seasons on their respective teams.

A couple of excellent receivers: Michael Aaron (Robichaud) and Scott Janack (Belleville) have been given the nod at the end posts, while the line, a formidable wall that can open the holes for the ballcarriers is made up of Tommy Waters (New Boston Huron), Ralph Farrell (Romulus), Dan Barlage (Belleville), Carl Selman (Robichaud), Michael Harding (Belleville), Paul Nowicki (Romulus), and Mike Emery (New Boston Huron).

The lineup, plus the defense which appeared on these pages last week, would give any team in any class in the state of Michigan a run for its money.

Just ask any high school coach in the area.

Let's take a closer look at what these players accomplished for their teams this season and why they are the "chosen ones."

THOMAS, a senior who checks in at 5-9, 180, helped the Bulldogs come back from an 0-2 start to string six consecutive victories and win the Suburban Athletic Conference championship outright. Robichaud finished with a 6-3 overall record.

For his role, SAC coaches honored Thomas as the First String quarterback. A four-year varsity starter, Thomas ended his prep football career with 47 pass completions out of 99 attempts for a total of 710 yards and eight TD passes.

"Eric is a versatile athlete," said Robichaud Coach Bob Yauck, who earned the post-season honor as the ANP's "Coach of the Year." "He had a rare sixth sense for football. He can read the defense and react quickly and with confidence. I don't think there is a finer quarterback on the high school scene."

Thomas also broke loose for a 57-yard touchdown against Class A power, Bay City John Glenn, in the final game of the 1988 season. If the Bulldogs, a Class B school, would have pulled that one out they probably would have qualified for the state playoffs.

HILL was the mainstay of the New Boston Huron assault. He's considered one of the best all-around athletes that Tom Labeau has ever coached. A junior who will be the Huron franchise next year, Hill made good on 30 of his 74 attempted passes for a total of 296 yards. He also rushed for 663 yards in 132 rushes. The 6-1, 160-pound athlete had the opportunity to handle nine kickoff returns and his performance resulted in another 351 yards for an incredible 39 yards per try. That's another reason why coaches couldn't leave this player off the team.

Paul finished with nine touchdowns and one two-point conversion and the only reason why he finished on the second team in the all-league selections is because of the team's overall record.

CHANDLER, was the workhorse of the Belleville offense. A 6-1, 200-pound senior who earned all-conference recognition in the tough Wolverine 'A' Conference, Virgil was given the ball 104 times and piled up 762 yards which led to six touchdowns. Picked the Tigers' Most Valuable Player on offense, Chandler is considered one of the most physically blessed players on Coach Dave McCartney's team. He has excellent speed and strength and could play college football if he decided he wanted to. Used also on defense, Virgil came up with one interception.

WHEATLEY, is making his second appearance on the All-Area team. He could become a rare athlete indeed for, barring injuries, Tyrone could become the first player in recent years to make the coveted ANP lineup four straight years. Despite missing two games because of an ankle hurt, Wheatley accounted for eight touchdowns rushed for 660 yards on 90 rushes. There's little doubt in anyone's mind that a fully healthy Wheatley would have carried this year's Bulldogs into the playoffs-and maybe beyond.

TRINITY, a 5-10, 180-pound senior, led Romulus ballcarriers and he left an indelible mark on Belleville. His 122-yards and two TDs helped the Eagles upset the Tigers in the season finale and gave departing coach Norb Glover an excellent going away present. Aro, in the company of the tough South Central Conference, managed to amass 566 yards on 99 rushes for a 5.7 yard per try. "Aro has always been one of our more reliable ballcarriers," Glover said. "He's a tough and hard-nosed football player."

AARON, a two-year starter, is an all-around athlete who also stars in basketball. In fact, some of the colleges would like to put to use his 6-5, 200-pound frame right now in their cage lineup. With deceptive speed, Aaron managed to score five TDs while he hauled in 18 passes for a total of 380 yards. That latter stat is a school record. He's also an excellent student.

JANACK, was named the best punter at the University of Michigan summer camp and Coach McCarney put Scott's talents to good use. Named as the Wolverine 'A' Conference's specialist, Janack got away 23 punts for an average of 38.8 yards per attempt. A three-year punter for the Tigers, the 6-0, 165-pound senior also doubled as a quarterback and an end for the Tigers. "He's the kind of athlete who is so versatile and intelligent that you could use him almost in any one of the skilled positions," McCarney said.

WATERS, is also a holdover from last year's All-Area team. A four-year varsity starter at Huron, Coach Labeau considers the 6-0, 215-pound senior as one of the most efficient blockers around. Named to the second team all-conference lineup, Waters has the potential of playing college football. He is also an All-Area wrestler. "We are going to miss Waters next year," Labeau said. "He's the kind of player who won't easily be replaced."

NOWICKI, another heavyweight - he's 6-5, 295-pounds - was the center attraction on the Romulus line. Switched from defensive to offensive tackle in order to provide the Eagles ballcarriers and quarterback adequate protection, Nowicki did a commendable job. He is a four-year starter for the Eagles. He also was runner-up in wrestling at the state championship and is considered among the top contenders for the state crown this year.

EMERY, is the spiritual leader of the Chiefs. An outstanding offensive guard who was used on all of the trap plays because of his blocking talents, Mike has been a member of Labeau's varsity for the past three years. "He's a solid performer and if we had more like him, believe me, we wouldn't have finished with a 3-6 record," Labeau noted.

FARRELL, a hard worker, earned the respect of all who played opposite him. Also an excellent blocker who completed a two-year stint on the Romulus varsity club, Farrell will exchange his grid gear for wrestling. A 5-10, 180-pound senior, Farrell will use his athletic talents during the winter on the wrestling mats. He was an SCC champ and also was a district and regional champ.

BARLAGE, a very aggressive and reliable player, was the co-MVP lineman on the Belleville team. The 5-10, 175-pound senior also is a two-year starter who never missed a day of practice in the two years he has played for the Tigers. "Dan is an outstanding one-on-one blocker," said McCarney, "and he is the kind of athlete all coaches like to have on their team."

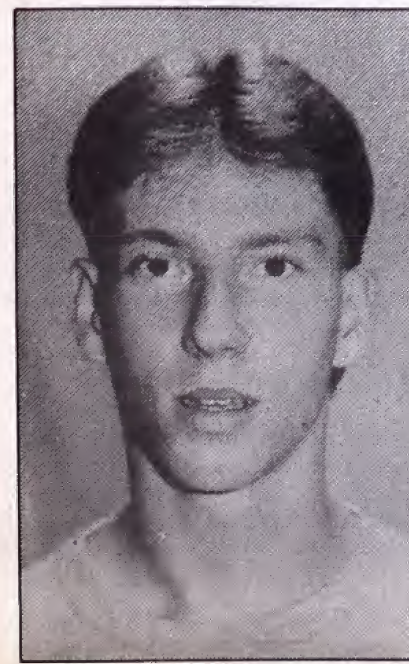

SELMAN, who is the Bulldogs' most consistent blocker is the player Yauck would go to for short gains. "We will expect bigger and better things from him next year," Yauck said. Converted into a lineman after playing fullback a year ago, Selman was named to the SAC Second Team this year and should have little difficulty moving into the First Team ranks a year from now, barring injury. He's a 6-1, 195-pound junior.

HARDING, rounds out this year's All-Area offense. The 5-11, 205-pound senior guard was used on all of the Tigers' trap plays and earned co-MVP honors for his efforts. A two-year starter, Harding also has the potential to play college football if he should choose to do so.

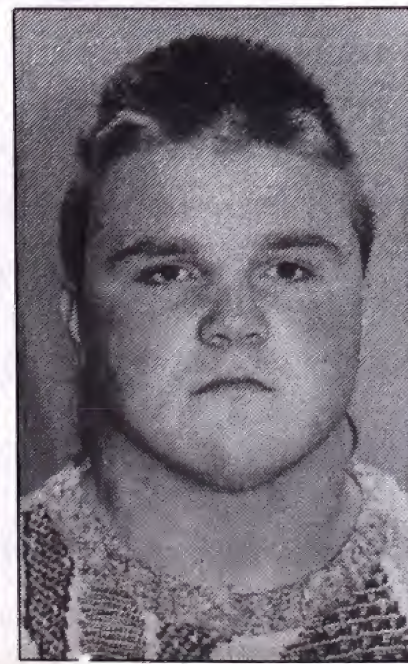

Last week, the ANP inadvertently omitted Lennell Brooks stats and photo from the All-Area Defense. Here they are:

BROOKS, is a three-year letterman for the Bulldogs who is "pound-for-pound" (he's 155) as tough as they come", according to Yauck. Brooks' quickness to get across the line of scrimmage is one of the reasons why he is an unanimous all-SAC choice. He is also credited with six sacks of the quarterback and a pair of fumble recoveries.

'Rubber game'

Belleville ousts Romulus in 1st round, 49-42

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

It was the "rubber game" between two arch-rivals.

Belleville and Romulus met last week for the third time this year on the basketball court, but this time the loser would pack up their uniforms for the season.

It was one of those do-or-die games for both teams.

And when all of the shooting ceased, it was Belleville that strolled off the basketball court with a 49-42 victory in the first round of the Class A district basketball playoffs. The victory also was Coach Mike Garland and the Tigers' ticket to the semifinal round.

"It was a great game for us," said Garland whose club will meet Taylor Kennedy. (Kennedy drew a first-round bye). "We split with them (Romulus) during the course of the regular season and this set up this "rubber game."

Kennedy is one team that has escaped our scrutiny. Believe me, we will have to be ready to play if we want to reach the finals.

Mike Garland
Belleville cage coach

And it looked as if Romulus was going to run away with the victory. Center Laurie Berlinn teamed with Rachel Hawk to score the first 10 points and staked the hosts to a 12-9 first period lead.

However, Belleville managed to overcome the early deficit as Garland switched defenses and went to a full-court press. That paid off in turnovers. Romulus didn't make the adjustment in time as the Eagles were outscored 22-10 in the span of the next eight minutes. Leading the rampage was Christy Garrett, a 5-7 senior guard who drilled in 10 of her game high 24 points in that frame.

At the halfway mark, Belleville had built up a 31-22 lead. And they needed that cushion.

Again it was Berlinn, who was an All-Area center a year ago, who brought the Eagles back. Berlinn tossed in 19 points (for the evening) as the Eagles cut the Belleville lead to 43-38 when the third period ended.

Garland decided to play it safe in the final eight minutes, and the tactics worked. Going only for the sure thing, the Tigers won a 6-4 duel in the final eight minutes and sealed the victory.

Neither team did anything that they could write home about at the foul line. Belleville made only two of 10 free throws as compared to Romulus' four of 13 performances.

Kathy Murphy, also an All-Area pick of a year ago, was the only other Belleville player to score in double figures. She had 13 for the Tigers. Hawk's 10 and Berlinn's 19 topped the Eagles' scorers.

Garland said he doesn't know what to expect from Kennedy.

"Although we have scouted most of the teams in our area this season, Kennedy somehow escaped our scrutiny," the Belleville coach said. "Believe me we will have to be ready for them if we want to reach the finals."

The championship will be decided Wednesday. The winner of the Belleville - Kennedy game will take on Taylor Truman and Southgate Anderson.

Inkster, Huron survive 1st Class B cage tests

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

Going their separate ways, Inkster and New Boston Huron passed their first tests at the Class B district playoffs.

However, the two could possibly meet next week in the regionals if they win district titles. But, Inkster would have to eliminate the state champ, Dearborn Divine Child, a tough assignment for anyone, especially since the Falcons are rated among the best in the state.

Coach Bill Harrison and the Chiefs had to contend with Monroe Catholic Central, a team that had beaten them during the regular conference season.

Inkster broke open a close first period against natural rival, Robichaud, by outscoring the hosts 21-3 in the second period, and went on to win, 67-37.

Robichaud made it close only for the first eight minutes

(14-10) thanks to Sylvia Murphy, who had scored five of the first 10 Robichaud points.

But after that it was all Inkster. Angela Thomas tossed in eight of her 21 points in the second period and before the half ended, the Vikings were up 35-13 and out of danger.

Thomas finished with 21 points and teammate Ursula Harris contributed 12 in the Vikings' 11th win in 21 starts this season.

"I was a bit concerned after that first quarter," said Inkster Coach Dwight Hotchkiss. "We were making too many mistakes and we just didn't look right out there."

"It all changed in the second period, though, and we coasted."

Belleville is runner-up to Trenton at conference swim championships

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

Sparked by senior Gina Montie's double gold medal winning performance, Belleville finished second to state-ranked Trenton at the 1988 Wolverine 'A' Conference swimming & diving championships.

Montie swam a brilliant race in the 50- and 100-yard freestyle events and brought the curtains down on an outstanding prep swim career with two conference titles.

Montie's teammate, Jenny Snure, who is a freshman, made her initial appearance at the conference championships as she picked up the gold for her performance in the 200-yard individual medley.

Montie and Snure's outstanding performances helped Coach Greg Cooper's team finish in second place. They trailed only Trenton in the final league standings.

Trenton, ranked among the top five girls' swimming teams in the state this season, garnered a total of 336 points. The Trojans captured the title with more than 100 points to spare. Belleville was second with 210.5, followed by Dearborn Fordson (167.0), Wayne Memorial (143.0), Wyandotte (126), Monroe (106), and Southgate Anderson (39.50). Lincoln Park, the eighth member of the conference, dropped the swim program this year because of a lack of swimmers.

Cooper, in his sophomore year as the Tiger coach, was pleased with his team's overall efforts. "Our kids swam better than I imagined they would. We moved up a notch in the final standings from last year. I believe improving is what it's all about."

Montie, a 5-foot-1 senior received her competition in the form of Trenton and Fordson in the 50-yard freestyle. And, after hitting the first turn, she coasted to a victory on a 26.44 wave. She came back and swam a 58.7 to win the 100-yard freestyle.

Snure, who swam away the 200 IM crown with an outstanding effort in the breaststroke, was clocked in the winning time of 2:27.25. With three years of varsity competition ahead of her, she could set a score of records before she ends her high school career.

Snure was runner-up to Jenny Meckoloff of Fordson in the 100-yard breaststroke. The Fordson breaststroker carded a 1:12.82 in victory while Belleville swimmer came away with a silver for her 1:16.61 effort.

Belleville also received a silver medal effort out of senior Melanie Merritt, who trailed Wayne's Kathy Farrell to the finish. Farrell was clocked in 5:34.88 which gave her the gold, while Merritt had a 5:46.59 effort for her silver.

Kristin Curtis also finished second for the Tigers, covering the 100-yard backstroke in 1:11.85. She was beaten to the wire by Trenton's Cindy McGregor (1:11.17).

Cooper's 200-yard medley relay was disqualified, which put the Tigers in the hole right at the beginning of the meet. They also went into the championships without the services of a diver.

The Tiger 400-yard freestyle team of Montie, Jennifer Caldwell, Snure and Merritt finished second (4:00.0) to Trenton (3:54.19).

Merritt also earned a bronze medal for her third-place finish in the 200-yard freestyle (2:09.13).

Belleville had three fifth places with Curtis, in the 100-yard butterfly (1:11.22); and Jennifer Caldwell, in the 100-yard freestyle (1:02.89). Sixth-place awards went to Belleville swimmers Shelene Reed, in the 50-yard freestyle (28:35); Christy Adkins, in the 100-yard backstroke (1:15.33); and Jennifer Caldwell, 100-yard breaststroke (1:22.26).

Belleville brought the curtains down on a 5-1 conference and a 9-2 overall season.

Inkster was faced with another Suburban Athletic Conference rival, Willow Run, Monday night. The winner was to advance to the championship round scheduled for 5:30 p.m. today. The winner plays the survivor of the Divine Child and Dearborn Heights Crestwood game.

In the meantime, Huron, the defending district champ, ousted a stubborn Ypsilanti Lincoln, 66-42, to earn the right to meet St. Mary's for the championship. (The championship was to be decided Monday night at Monroe Jefferson).

Ypsi just couldn't stop All-State candidate Lauri Labeau, who scored a game-high 28 points and counted nine assists to lead the Chiefs to victory. Teammate Laurel Haener also hit in double figures. She had 18.

New Boston had an overwhelming 34-18 edge at the half.

Harrison, who is stepping down as head coach after the current campaign, said that St. Mary's has an excellent team and, "to beat them we're going to have to get outstanding performances from all of our kids."

Belleville's Rachel Melnyk (dark jersey) hounds a Romulus player during the first game of the Class A district basketball players that ended in a 49-42 Belleville victory. The loss ended Romulus's cage season and moved the Tigers into the semifinal rounds of the playoffs. The championship is to be decided 5:50 p.m. today at Romulus High. Cage previews coming up

What are Inkster High and Coach George Thompson Jr.'s chances of winning the tough Suburban Athletic Conference basketball championship this season?

Can Romulus ever repeat as the Class A state champ, a feat they accomplished three years ago thanks to the performances of All-American, Terry Mills, and Stevie Glenn?

And how will Belleville, always so close to fielding a championship team, fare in the Wolverine 'A' Conference this year?

And will sophomore Robichaud Coach Monte Dennard be ready to make a repeat run with his Bulldogs of Robichaud for the SAC crown?

These and many other questions will be answered in the weeks ahead.

In the meantime, the Associated Newspapers' sports staff is busy interviewing area high school coaches, asking their opinions about their and rival teams; their hopes of winning a title and who will be the next Terry Mills and Stevie Glens.

To keep up with what's happening in local sports, the best place to turn is to the ANP sports section.

Pssst! YOUR CHOLESTEROL AND YOUR HEART MAY BE HAVING AN UNHEALTHY RELATIONSHIP

By Mark D. Richter, M.D.

Every time a new medicine for the treatment of cholesterol is in the news, or another study has been done that shows the risks of having high cholesterol levels, you are reminded that it's not good for you. What is cholesterol, where does it come from, what does it do, and how does it affect your heart?

CHOLESTEROL IS FAT

Cholesterol is one of two major forms of fat found in the bloodstream. It enters the bloodstream through the food we eat and through the liver which manufactures cholesterol.

We vary greatly in the amount of cholesterol we absorb from our food, and the amount we manufacture. People on the same diet and under the same conditions can have much different cholesterol levels.

You may be surprised to know that none of us could survive without cholesterol. It's needed by our bodies to make hormones which regulate our body functions, to make bile salts which help digest food, and to make cell membranes.

TOO MUCH IS UNHEALTHY

Unfortunately, too much cholesterol is harmful and can lead to hardening of the arteries (atherosclerosis) which results in fatty deposits on blood vessel walls. These deposits block blood flow and, if severe enough, can cause heart attacks and strokes.

HOW MUCH IS TOO MUCH?

There are National Institute of Health guidelines for cholesterol levels. Lowering cholesterol by one percent can lower your risk of heart disease and strokes by two percent.

Eating foods that are lower in cholesterol and saturated fats may be all that is needed. However, for some, dietary measures are not enough and medication to lower cholesterol may be necessary.

OTHER RISK FACTORS

It's important to address other risk factors in the development of hardening of the arteries such as cigarette smoking, high blood pressure, diabetes, obesity, and the lack of exercise.

BUSINESS NEWS DIGEST

New cable show debuts in Wayne

Subscribers to Cablevision, in Wayne, can tune in to the Turner Network Television service beginning Dec. 1.

The Working Channel, now seen on channel 23, will be removed from the cable system offerings to make room for the new service.

The service — offered to all basic subscribers — will include a lineup of original specials, classic films and exclusive television series, designed to inform, educate and entertain, according to Mike Reynolds, general manager of Cablevision of Dearborn/Wayne.

Future program highlights include The Making of a Legend, Gone With The Wind, The Story of Hollywood and A Man For All Seasons.

Local florists aid decorating effort

Officials from two local floral shops will display their wares at the Henry Ford Estate-Fair Lane, as part of the Christmas holiday celebration there.

Shirley Dean's Flowers, of Inkster, and Keller and Stein, of Wayne, are participating in the effort. The florists are using the 1988 holiday theme for the home, "The Renaissance," to decorate one room each in the mansion.

Floral guided tours of the homes are offered from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 1 to 4:30 p.m. Sunday. Cost is $5 for adults, $4 for students and seniors.

The estate is located on the campus of the University of Michigan-Dearborn. Call 593-5555.

Target is funding area art projects

Detroit area family-oriented arts and human service organization are benefiting from approximately $300,000 in grants from "Project Family," a community-service program funded by Target Stores.

The project includes the donations during a three-year period. Project Family is designed to enrich and strengthen family life by providing support for affordable, quality programs in communities near the 13 current and planned Target stores.

Currently, a Target store is located in Westland. A Canton Township store will open in 1989.

More information about the grants is available by calling (612) 370-8219.

Area hotel needs 440 new workers

Officials from the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, in Dearborn, are searching for 440 employees for the new facility, set to open Jan. 9. The 308-guest room complex is located in the Fairlane Plaza, near the Fairlane Town Center.

A mass hiring and interviewing session is set from 8 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. Nov. 30, Dec. 1 and Dec. 2 and from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Dec. 3.

The employee-selection interviews will be staged in the hotel ballroom. All applicants will be briefed on the history and philosophy of the hotel and speak to managers. Refreshments will be served.

The Ritz-Carlton, Dearborn, is located at 300 Town Center Drive, Dearborn. It is accessible from Hubbard Drive, north of the Fairlane shopping mall.

Hospital is lauded for advertisements

Two of the Dearborn-based Oakwood Hospital advertising campaigns are being featured in the November-December issue of Healthcare Advertising Review. The publication is recognizing the campaigns as "excellent examples of sound marketing planning and relevant consumer-oriented advertising."

'Tis the season: Local sales already booming

By JIM RINK
ANP Staff Writer

'Tis the season to go shopping.

The Christmas countdown is here and local retailers are stocking the shelves with items that they hope will be popular with Christmas crowds.

Kathy Watler, manager of the B Dalton bookstore in Westland Center, is busy shelving the hundreds of boxes of books coming in to the store for the Christmas rush.

Popular gift items at B Dalton include Steven King's Nightmares in the Sky and Sidney Sheldon's The Sands of Time, a recently released novel.

"We have a whole gift table of just picture books," Watler said. "They are more popular now than in years past. Three Christmases ago, there were not as many 'coffee table' books."

Among the more popular picture books are those dealing with the 25th anniversary of John F. Kennedy's death, and a series of books by Life magazine — books featuring funny photos, classic photos from past issues and others.

Watler bases her marketing strategy on standard sources like the New York Times best-seller list and various book reviews, but she also listens to shows like Oprah Winfrey to see if a particular book is mentioned on the air.

"If they mention a book, I order it right away," she said. "Ten minutes after the show, people come in looking for the book."

During the Christmas season, Watler orders extra picture books and cookbooks, which are also very popular gift-giving items.

"I always give books as Christmas presents," said Watler. "I believe in people reading — that's why I got into this business. You get a book, you can enjoy it for years. Books are very useful gifts and you can find the perfect book for just about anyone."

In terms of hi-tech Christmas items, remote control cars and computers are very hot this year, according to Brad Torrey, manager of the Radio Shack in Belleville.

"I have both in stock, but I'm going to run out before Christmas time," Torrey said.

Popular computers are the Tandy 1000 TL and the Tandy 1000 HX, personal computers which use MS DOS operating systems and which are IBM-compatible.

Torrey said his toys are shipped automatically from Texas, where Radio Shack executives determine what will sell based on sales figures from the previous year.

The bigger, faster remote control cars which are already disappearing from the shelves include the Golden Arrow dune buggy and the 4 X 4 Ford pickup truck. Both vehicles use wireless remotes.

The "grandparent gifts," said Torrey — the gifts which grandparents buy for their grandchildren — are those toys which make a lot of noise, like space pistols or hand-held games like Spell 'N' Math.

Torrey said his line of equipment is diversified.

"People come in and buy the stereos and the VCRs when times are good. When times are not so good, they buy parts. No matter what the economy's doing, I roll along."

In terms of women's and children's fashion, "embellished clothing" is in style, according to Stan Siwula, corporate spokesman for Crowley's.

"Sweaters with buttons, bangles, sequins, add-ons, are very popular," Siwula said. "They're getting stronger and stronger in women's and children's clothing."

Also riding a trendy wave, said Siwula, is eel-skin wallets, which have a very tough hide. "In terms of women's accessories, silk scarves and Isotoner gloves are still very popular," Siwula said. "They're easy to buy because of the universal size."

Liz Claiborne handbags and Totes accessory items for men are also high on the fashionable Christmas shopping list.

For the kids, popular items at the Kmart in Canton include Ninja turtles, according to Jane Wood, merchandise manager. The turtle figures wear realistic Ninja clothing. "We just can't keep them in the store," Wood said.

Another item which they just can't keep in the store is called Nerf fencing. It's a soft, spongy sword, which young fencers can thrust harmlessly hither and yon in fake combat.

Little Miss Makeup is also very popular. "It's a doll that you wipe with a damp sponge," explained Wood. "She appears with makeup on."

Dinosaurs are still selling pretty well, Wood said, but not as well as the Ghostbusters proton pack, a life-size backpack which young people can wear to blast ghosts back to where they came from.

Toys R Us is the largest toy retailing chain in the nation. Toy vendors come to Toys R Us executives in January to show them merchandise for the coming year. Some items are test marketed.

Area business, students supporting tree festival

By FLORENCE WEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

Community residents and business people are reaching out to help create a holiday fantasy for children.

These people are donating time, money and creativity to the Festival of Trees, a benefit for Children's Hospital of Michigan. The annual fundraiser creates a magical atmosphere with 100 professionally decorated Christmas trees, a detailed gingerbread village, a garden of wreaths, entertainment and special appearances by Santa.

The festivities begin today at Cobo Hall in Detroit. Proceeds are raised through corporate sponsorship of exhibits and special events, donations, sales of trees and other displays and a raffle.

The Evergreen Endowment Fund at Children's Hospital of Michigan is the sole beneficiary of the festival. It was formed in 1985 to fund research of childhood diseases. The festival also began in 1985 and since then $510,000 has been raised for the fund. Festival organizers hope to raise $380,000 this year, bringing the total to almost $1 million.

One of the more enjoyable ways for community businesses to participate in the festival is to design a tree.

Sherry Hissong of Shirley Dean's Flowers in Inkster said since her store began participating in the event three years ago, everyone helping out has had a good time.

"Everybody looks forward to it coming. Then you know Christmas time is here," she said. "It gets you right in the mood."

Hissong said each tree designer uses a different theme. Her store chose "Traditions of Christmas Past and Present." She is using small touches such as small nosegays, crystalized fruit and sparkle beads to enhance the effect.

A full day is needed to decorate a tree from top to bottom, Hissong said. She assigns the job to one person who tackles it during an eight-hour shift.

Also popular with visitors of the festival is the elaborate gingerbread village consisting of 33 buildings, sidewalks, curbs and lights. Fourteen professional chefs and 19 culinary students will construct individual entries to complete the village. The buildings will be made of eatable ingredients such as chocolate, marzipan, royal icing, sugar and nougat. Nine of the student entries are from Wayne County Community College.

Other festival features include a special isle of Christmas wreaths created by 67 garden clubs including the Van Born Garden Club.

Festival admission is $3 for adults, $1 for children and $2.50 for senior citizens.

Silence won't be golden for Bush administration

The next 60 days will determine if the Bush administration will be successful or a one-term failure. Since the election, Bush has been silent. He won the election. Now, he acts as though he could rest.

How wrong he is. The level of rhetoric coming out of Washington and the media is deafening. The Fed is not innocent in increasing the level of rhetoric. Fed Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan has said "Bush will have to do something now, or I will be forced to raise interest rates."

Where is Bush? Where are his advisors? Where is Baker? Where are his friends that should be defending him? The rhetoric is starting to define Bush, the same way he defined Dukakis — weak and directionless.

The view from Wall Street is no less confusing. The bond market is still in a wait-and-see mode. Gold and silver prices will move slower, giving yields a little slack.

This week, the short-term traders hear the rhetoric from Washington and look for safety in cash. However, favorable news and bargains will draw them back to the markets on the buy-side.

Intermediate- and long-term traders will be closing out positions that are selling at high multiples and may be brought into the market for bargains.

The market this week is looking for a sell-off to push it into an oversold position and, possibly, set the conditions for a rally. The market is getting itself into a negative position, one which would start by lowering earnings estimates and sales.

This could start a major sell-off. Circumstances are ripe for this to occur. The fear of recession, a weak president, a possible increase in interest rates, budgets out of control... politics aren't "bean bag." I will settle for early session downward pressure and some last-session recovery.

Designer comfort Artist makes sweatshirts newest craze

profile

Sweatshirts take on a new look when they are painted.

No longer are they to be used solely for jogging.

Exotic birds and flowers and interesting designs painted on the front of these shirts make them suitable for parties, shopping and even work.

Catherine Laiho is a sweatshirt transformer. She paints designs on shirts which were once reserved for athletes.

Laiho is one of three artists who work at Sweats & More, on North Wayne Road, Westland.

Laiho and the other artists occupy a small corner of the store, painting made-to-order sweatshirts. Customers can order the design they want, and Laiho and the other artists paint the shirts freehand.

"We do a lot of lettering and a lot of pets," Laiho said, as she placed the finishing touches on a USA Coca-Cola shirt. This order included a dozen shirts with the same design, but she has filled larger orders.

"I did 60 sweatshirts once with people's names on them for a family reunion," Laiho said.

The orders need not be that large, however. She can paint just one special sweatshirt for a customer.

Sweats & More opened approximately eight months ago. The only products of the business are sweatshirts and sweatpants — both in a variety of colors and sizes.

Laiho will paint whatever the customer wants, but the extravagant designs do come with a price. The charge is based on the number of hours estimated to do the work.

"It usually ends up taking longer than we expect, so we are under-charging," she said.

Laiho uses a regular paint brush and special fabric paints to complete the designs.

The frustration really begins when a design is ruined and Laiho has to begin again.

"It doesn't happen often, but once I was doing a really elaborate car design and had finished the car, and I misspelled the name," Laiho said.

Once the design is completed successfully, the owner can wash the shirt like a regular sweatshirt.

Robert Dutko, manager of Sweats & More, said the painted sweatshirt craze is intensifying and that, the more customers see of Laiho's work, the more they want.

Dutko expects the sweatshirts and pants will be very popular as Christmas gifts.

There is almost always an artist available at the store, so customers can talk with them directly to choose a suitable design.

"The great american road belongs to me & my Reatta."

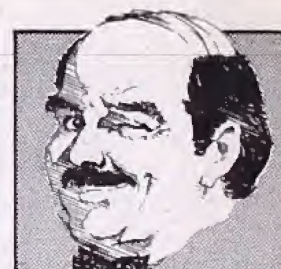

"I get looks! I get stares! I feel great!"

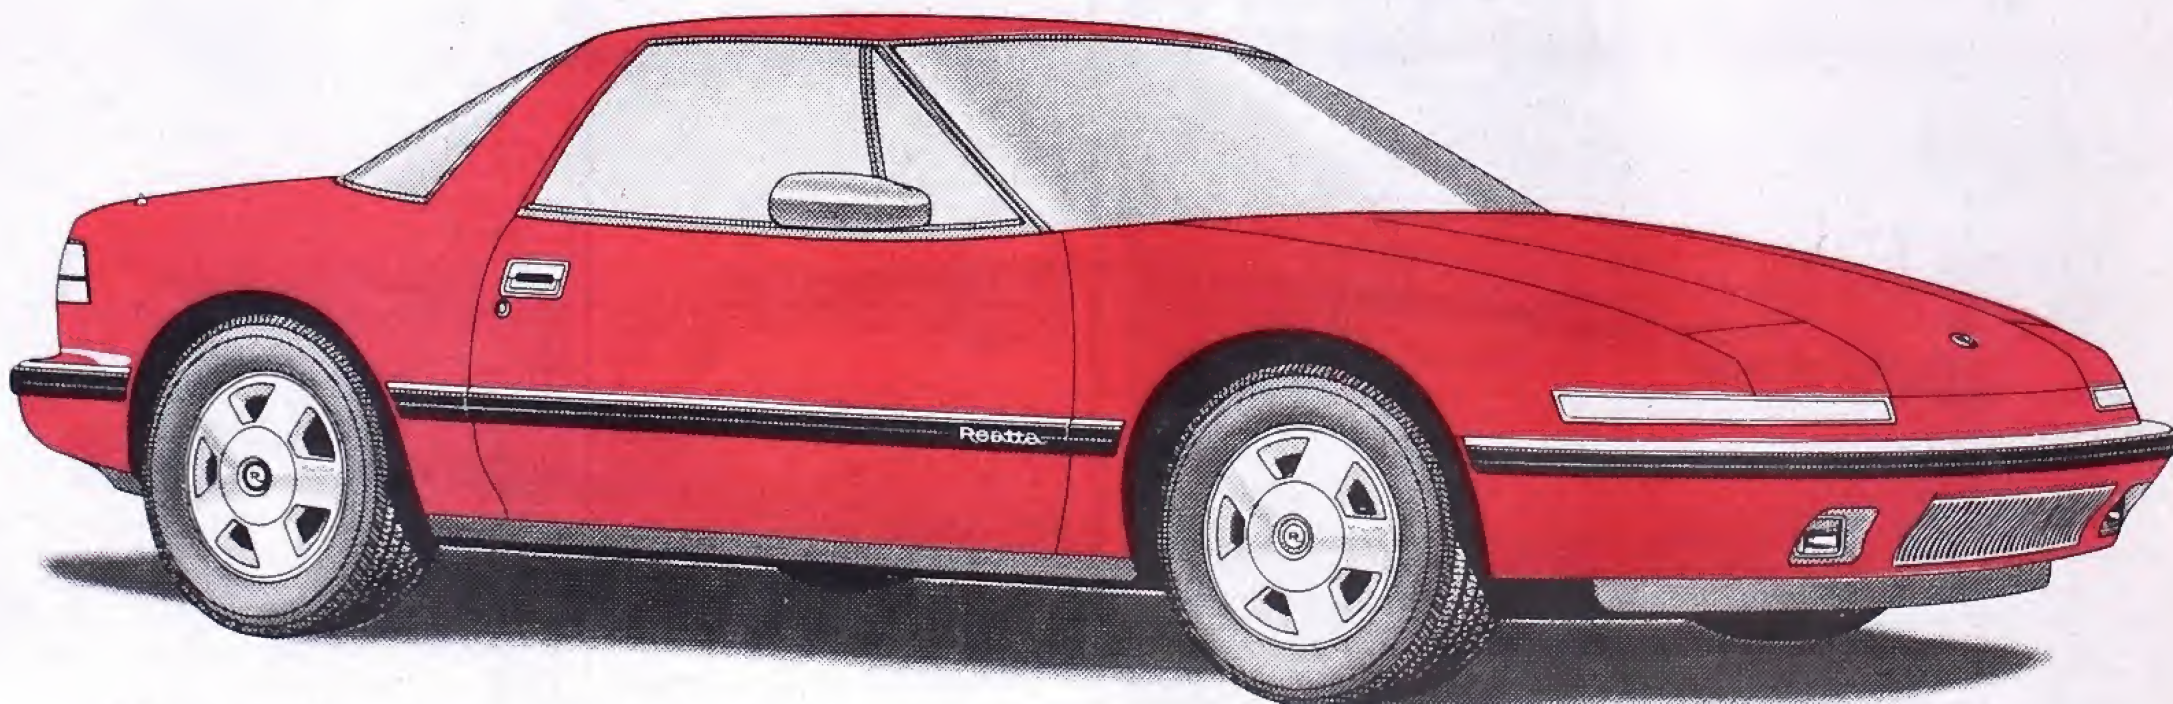

Reatta

"I never dreamed I could own one."

"I'll hold on to it forever. . . Reatta, I love you!"

It takes a special breed of car to command the Great American Road. The 1989 Buick Reatta is a royal part of that breed.

Reatta is sporty. Reatta is powerful. Reatta is luxurious.

Reatta is, above all, a Buick.

An exacting attention to detail has created a car that seems like a step into America's past. Reatta is quality, not quantity.

Unlike a traditional assembly line, which moves at its own relentless pace, a computer-controlled Automatic Guided Vehicle moves the Reatta body and chassis to each craft station, where it is joined with the appropriate componentry.

The Guided Vehicle moves to the next craft station only after the workers decide that their portion of the assembly process is finished according to demanding specifications.

That is why the body surface of each Reatta is prepared by hand before paint is applied. Hand-buffing of the final clearcoat ensures a depth of lustre that is truly remarkable.

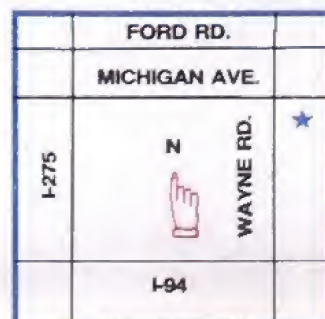

Power. Performance. Luxury. Style.

That's the 1989 Buick Reatta, a motorcar of uncommon practicality.

JFK

REMEMBERING

Kennedy's death was end of U.S. royalty

By JIM RINK
ANP Staff Writer

*Don't let it be forgot, that once there was a spot,
for one brief shining moment that was known as Camelot.*

The lines were a favorite lyric of former President John F. Kennedy.
Nov. 22 marks the 25th anniversary of his death.
On Nov. 22, 1963, two bullets, allegedly fired by a lone gunman in an abandoned Dallas warehouse, ended Kennedy's life. And the kingdom which came to be known as Camelot came crashing down.

Many people remember where they were when Kennedy was shot. It was an event which jarred the national consciousness with unprecedented force. Comfortable and capable in front of the camera, Kennedy allowed Americans to have a private glimpse of his family, his friends and his everyday world.

We all remember the pictures of John Jr., "John-John," playing under his father's desk in the Oval Office. Pictures of John Kennedy, Jacqueline and Caroline sitting on the grass or walking along the beach at Hyannis Port, Mass., also come to mind.

When Kennedy was assassinated, his death became a personal, painful loss for all Americans.

"It seemed like JFK held so much promise, so much potential which had not yet unfolded," said Michael Homel, a professor of history at Eastern Michigan University. "In many ways, it was like the death of a child."

The infancy of the Kennedy administration left much to be desired, according to Homel. Presidential performance in 1961 and 1962 on the domestic and foreign policy fronts "does not get high marks these days," he said.

But, he quickly added, in 1963, some things had begun to happen.

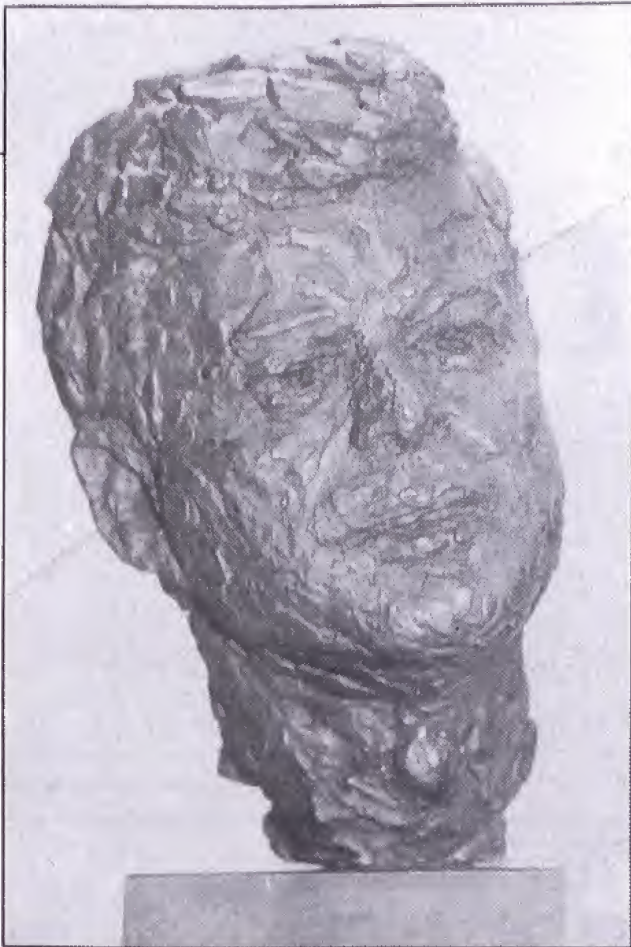

"His endorsement of civil-rights legislation, that's the first," Homel said. "Then, the Kennedy administration was beginning to discover poverty in America, beginning to draw up policies to address that. In the area of foreign policy, in 1963, you had the nuclear test ban on testing in the atmosphere and Kennedy giving a speech, telling us it's time to question some of our long-held assumptions about the Cold War."

Since Kennedy's death, public fascination with the Kennedy family has grown to a point beyond mere curiosity. Tabloids and talk shows consistently feature members of the family who are both in and out of the political arena.

Homel speculated that the Kennedys are the closest thing to royalty that America will ever see.

"Americans are interested in the Donald Trumps, the Ford family, people with a lot of money," Homel said. "They're very glamorous. There is a real fascination with the British royalty."

"We've made the Kennedys America's royal family. They combine money, glamour, a sense of style and an interest in public life. Many members of the Kennedy family have wanted to be in the public eye. The Kennedys have courted this. The same thing existed with the Rockefellers a few years ago," Homel said.

Perhaps, the most intriguing question which historians ask themselves, Homel said, is "what if JFK had lived?"

"We probably would have had 24 years of Kennedys in the White House," said Rep. Lynn Owen (D-Maybee). "Who knows? If he had lived, it might have set up a very long regime for the Kennedys."

Owen was in an auto shop class at Willow Run High School when news of Kennedy's death filtered into the room, via a portable radio.

A HERO

U.S. Rep. William Ford (D-Taylor) worked for the Kennedy presidential campaign in 1960. He was in Lansing when he heard the news of the President's death.

At the time, Ford served in the state legislature on a part-time basis, before the position became full time.

"I was sitting in my law office," Ford said. "The music was being pumped in. I was just talking to the banker about a mortgage. They interrupted the music with the news."

"The effect it had on everybody . . . it was a lasting effect, as if he had been a family member. It was a devastating thing. Kennedy turned on a whole generation of people to the idea that public service was a good thing to do."

Rep. Justine Barns (D-Westland) learned of Kennedy's death from her youngest son, after he returned from school.

"In my lifetime, other than World War II, his death was the most traumatic experience this country has ever faced," Barns said.

It was Kennedy, who, as the captain of PT 109, risked his own life to save members of his crew. It was Kennedy, who, while addressing students at the University of Michigan, spawned the idea for the Peace Corps.

It was Kennedy, who, during his inaugural address, told Americans "Ask not what your country can do for you but what you can do for your country."

Could Kennedy have led this country to a higher, loftier peak? Could he have avoided the inevitable scandal arising from his alleged love affairs? How would Kennedy handle the national deficit? The economic invasion of Japan and Germany?

When Kennedy died, did Camelot die with him? Or, like the Broadway musical, was it always just a dream?

The Associated Newspapers devoted several special-coverage pages to the local reaction to Kennedy's death in the Wednesday, Nov. 27 editions of The Eagle.

Local reaction: Wherever they were, residents still remember

The year was 1963.
The torch had been passed to a new generation of Americans.

John Fitzgerald Kennedy, the young, handsome, charismatic senator from Massachusetts, and his young and beautiful bride, Jackie, and their children were in the White House.

The legend of Camelot was alive.

For 1,000 days, America was young again. Americans could do anything — even place a man on the Moon.

Then, on a bright and sunny day in Dallas, the dream became a legend, and the legend, a dream.

November 22, 1963.

"A bomb fell on the city of Wayne, Friday," were the words used by an Associated Newspapers staff writer to describe the reaction to President Kennedy's death that day.

"Although no fatalities were incurred, the mental casualties among the residents were great. Business came to a quick halt. The stunning news shocked the

A bomb fell on the city of Wayne Friday. Although no fatalities were incurred, the mental casualties among the residents were great.

populace into a motionless state. City and federal offices immediately issued orders suspending activity," the writer reported. "Business establishments, churches and schools closed down and prepared elaborate memorials. On Monday — a day set aside in memorium for the late "courageous leader" — John F. Kennedy — the city of Wayne became a silent city of prayer and homage. Traffic practically disappeared."

Businesses and factories closed from noon until 3 p.m. and many did not re-open until Tuesday. Sports events were either cancelled or postponed and most of the regularly scheduled government meetings were cancelled.

The Belleville Enterprise noted the community had "joined the world in mourning for our slain president." One of the first expressions of grief was a ceremony conducted at the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 4434 with more than 200 members present to hear Post Commander Jerry Maton deliver the eulogy. During a Freedom Fund Dinner in Sumpter Township a Nov. 23 program "was conducted in a most reverent manner" to honor the slain president.

Hundreds of people attended memorial services at St. Mary's Church in Wayne and St. Norbert's Church in Inkster. Observances also were conducted in Canton Township, Nankin Township (now the city of Westland), Inkster and Romulus.

Is there an American who was part of that era who can ever to forget those tragic hours, the day that changed history, America and the world?

We asked several local residents that very question.

■ Most people heard of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy on the radio, while at school or at their place of work.

State Sen. William Faust (D-Westland) remembers exactly where he was when he first heard of the tragedy.

Faust, then supervisor of Nankin Township, was working at his desk in the township hall, on Dorsey Road. The township clerk poked her head in his office and said the president had been shot.

"Everything went quiet," Faust remembered. "We all walked into the clerk's office and sat, staring at the radio in silence, waiting for more news."

As township officials sat in the clerk's office, other township employees, including current Westland Councilman and former Mayor Tom Brown, gathered outside the office doors.

"All I remember is the quiet. I'm sure more than one silent prayer was said," Faust said.

Finally, reports of the president's death were verified.

It wasn't until the supervisor went home that he would see the images that would affect his life forever. He remembers vividly the pictures of the first lady as she reached over the car for the hand of a Secret Service agent and later pictures of Lee Harvey Oswald, the man accused of the assassination.

"It seemed like America was falling apart," Faust said. "Johnson was being sworn into office. The goals were the same, but the methods were different."

"Kennedy changed presidential politics forever. I had a very special feeling for him," Faust said.

The Kennedy campaign was the first Faust worked on tirelessly.

ly. Kennedy was a symbol of everything the country could be.

"He defined a national purpose, something no president has done since," Faust said. "It was his enthusiasm that propelled me into a career of public office."

Faust sounds disappointed when he talks of never having met Kennedy — he has met every president after Kennedy. But the image of the man which Americans saw on their televisions has stayed with him.

■ "I remember exactly where I was," said Dianne Neihengen, senior citizen coordinator for Canton Township.

Neihengen was a junior at Dominican High School, in Detroit, when Kennedy was shot. She was in sixth-hour Spanish class.

Neihengen was part of the "younger generation" of students and professionals whose ideals were greatly influenced by Kennedy.

"After the announcement was made, we all went back to our home rooms," Neihengen said. "It was an all-Catholic high school. The emotions were very high. It didn't seem like just a few people were affected. Everyone in the school was terribly, terribly saddened."

"I was devastated, just devastated. It was such a feeling of terrible sadness, like something precious had been taken away. It had a strong effect on my generation."

"In the 1950s, all politicians seemed to be older men. When he (JFK) was elected, it seemed as if he was inviting all age groups into government. There was tremendous hope. He made people feel very patriotic, as if working for your country, doing for your country, was the very American thing to do."

Neihengen saw JFK speak at a VFW convention in Detroit. Her grandfather snuck her in, she said. Kennedy was "electrifying" and "magnetic," she said.

"He made government and politics vibrant and interesting," Neihengen said. "I haven't felt about a president since then like I did for him, and that's sad."

Did Neihengen think there was a conspiracy to kill JFK?
"Absolutely."

William Greenslait, Romulus fire chief, still remembers the day he heard that John F. Kennedy had been shot.

The news arrived while Greenslait was shopping at the Sears shopping center, in Lincoln Park.

"An elderly lady came out of the parking lot screaming and crying," he said.

Later, Greenslait and other people in the store heard official announcements from the radios and televisions in the store.

"I think it was a great shock to everyone," said Greenslait.

Now, he said, no one really knew the full impact of his death.

"We don't know if it would have been better or worse," he said. "All of us that knew of him loved him."

know if the Kennedy shooting was a conspiracy.

Varner said the nation still feels the impact of the Kennedy shooting. The treatment and behavior of anyone holding public office is different today, she explained.

"I was a student in my freshman year at Wayne State University," recalled Dr. Ernesto Minghine, assistant superintendent of Westwood Schools. "There were four of us in a car, listening to the radio, as we drove home from classes."

"Suddenly, the announcer came on," Minghine said. "He said: 'The President has been shot.' Then there was a very small pause. A lifetime, it seemed, until he uttered the rest, 'He had been mortally wounded.'"

"We pulled the car off to the service drive. And we sat there and listened. Believe me, there wasn't a dried eye in that car. We were all stunned."

In the young President Kennedy, Minghine said, the nation saw promise and opportunity.

"And with his death, we felt that a part of us also had been lost."

Minghine later earned his degree at WSU and went into the field of education. But, the day Kennedy was slain, he will never forget.

Wayne Councilman Thomas Kelly was like a lot other people. He looked up to John F. Kennedy. But Kelly was closer to the former president than most others.

"I worked a great deal on his campaign and met him on a number of occasions," Kelly said. "When he was killed, I got out of politics for a long time. It effected me that much."

Kelly, a native of New York, heard the news when he left the New York subway.

"I was taking the subway to Brooklyn to take a test, when I heard that he was shot," Kelly said. "It was just devastating. It was really gloom and doom in that school."

"Everything kept going," he said. "Everyone went about their business and life continued. But the atmosphere was so different."

"There was a lot of silence and just disbelief."

"He was a very intelligent person with a quick wit and very dynamic," Kelly continued. "He brought a tremendous sense of class to politics, something that seemed to die with him."

"I always look back and say, what if? He just brought a great sense of hope, and I wonder how different the world would be if he lived."

Longtime Belleville resident and local historian, Park Gregory, recalled hearing the news of the assassination at the close of classes at Taylor Center High School where he was a teacher.

Gregory said "fragmented news" about the assassination was piped through the public address system. A hush fell over the halls when students and teachers heard the news, he recalled.

"A hush fell across the halls as students went to their lockers and prepared to board buses. This was usually a time of high noise levels," Gregory said. "The teachers gathered in small groups unspeaking, except for an occasional prayer, 'My God,'"

Gregory put his memories of the day into a journal.

What are you doing sitting here reading? If it's Wednesday, you should be in the kitchen getting vegetables peeled for the feast tomorrow. If it's Thursday, you are neglecting your cleanup duties. And, if it's Friday, you should really be out taking advantage of the Christmas sales. You are behind, aren't you?

If you have your Christmas shopping nearly completed, however, and are one of those efficient types already planning your holiday entertaining up to and including Christmas dinner, I have a real reward for you. This is a wonderful, rich torte that is only appropriate at exceptionally festive meals. Additionally, this can be made in advance and freezes beautifully so you can make it way, way ahead of time (like tomorrow maybe) and then serve it with a flourish. This is a great festive treat to take along if invited out for a holiday meal, too. It will absolutely bring raves.

This torte is unusual enough to make it really special, while nobody could possibly afford to indulge in this calorie-laden delight more than once a year. Once a year, however, everyone deserves this type of indulgence.

Garnishing this treat can be a real labor of love. Chocolate curls and toasted almonds are great, but chocolate leaves with flower petals made from the slivered almonds with whole almonds as the centers of the flowers can make a real knock-out impression.

Chestnut torte

6 egg yolks at room temperature
1 1/2 cups sugar
1 tablespoon vanilla extract
1 15 1/2-ounce can unsweetened chestnut puree
1 cup ground blanched almonds
7 egg whites at room temperature

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Beat egg yolks with sugar until thick and pale. Beat in vanilla. Add chestnut puree and ground almonds. Mix well. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Fold into egg yolk mixture. Butter and flour two 8-inch cake pans, then butter and flour two baking parchment rounds for the bottoms. Pour mixture into the cake pans and bake for 1 hour. Remove from the oven and cool in the pans. Then, turn gently onto cake racks.

Mocha butter cream frosting

1 cup sugar
1/3 cup water
1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar
4 egg yolks
5 ounces semi-sweet chocolate
1/4 cup strong coffee
1 1/2 cups sweet butter, softened
3 tablespoons brandy or dark rum

In an enamel saucepan, boil sugar, 1/3 cup water and cream of tartar to soft-ball stage, or 235 degrees on a candy thermometer. Beat egg yolks until pale and thick. Slowly beat hot sugar mixture into egg yolks and continue beating until thick. In the top of a double boiler, melt the chocolate with the coffee over medium heat. Add chocolate to eggs, then beat in butter a little at a time until mixture is thick and smooth. Add rum and chill until thick enough to spread, about 30 minutes. Frost torte layers generously, then frost sides and top and garnish with chocolate sprinkles or toasted slivered almonds.

Disguising the word is half of the battle

By FLORENCE MEEKS
ANP Staff Writer

The day after Thanksgiving marks the beginning of two seasons — Christmas shopping and leftovers.

As the season continues, malls become packed with edgy shoppers, who are becoming tired of turkey sandwiches. The leftover syndrome continues into December and January, because of holiday meals and parties.

However, a number of cooks have developed techniques to increase the enjoyment of leftover dishes.

Monica Dubiel, of Westland, has been successfully utilizing leftovers for years and believes creativity and leftovers should be used hand in hand.

Cooking with leftovers is similar to the preparation of any meal, Dubiel said. The recipes she has created during the years have been popular with each of her five sons.

"My sons always say, 'Mom, you overdid it again,'" Dubiel said.

Experimenting is an important part of Dubiel's cooking. At times, she likes to be elaborate. She always enjoys being creative.

Dubiel's cooking skills were polished after marriage. Until that time, she did not devote much time to food.

Today, Dubiel's cooking extends beyond her family. Last Thursday, she prepared a meal for approximately 300 Westland senior citizens. She enjoys cooking for groups but admits that preparing large feasts is very stressful.

Thus, her best meals are those cooked for herself or for a small group, she said.

"I like to (cook) when I'm by myself," she said.

During those times, the creative ideas are plentiful, she explained.

Dubiel thinks many cooks enjoy creativity and make good use of leftovers. With the expensive prices in the market today, most people are forced to eat leftovers, Dubiel said.

"Food is too expensive right now to throw anything out," Dubiel said. "I just can't see doing that."

What follows are Dubiel's finest leftover recipes.

Turkey loaf

2 1/2 cup chopped turkey
3 cups cooked rice
1/4 cup chopped pimento
1/3 cup chopped green pepper
1/4 cup melted butter or margarine
1 cup chicken or turkey broth
1 cup condensed cream of mushroom soup
1 1/2 cup milk
Salt to taste

Combine turkey, rice, pimento, green pepper. Make a sauce with butter, soup and milk. Add salt. Thicken slightly with flour. Add turkey mixture. Cook slowly until well blended. Pour into 9 by 12 inch loaf pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes.

Turkey goulash

1 medium green pepper
1 small onion
1 teaspoon butter or margarine
1 1/2 cups chicken or turkey broth
2 1/2 cups leftover turkey
1 small can mushrooms
Salt to taste
Pepper to taste

Cut onion and green pepper into strips. Saute in butter or margarine until tender but not brown. Add broth, mushroom, turkey, salt and pepper. Simmer 15 minutes. Thicken slightly with dash of cornstarch. Serve over boiled potatoes.

Turkey casserole

30 crackers
1/4 tablespoon paprika
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon grated onion
3/4 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1 1/2 cups real mayonnaise

With a skillful hand, Chef Monica Dubiel (above) transforms leftovers into magic meals. Her cooking delicacies are well known in the area, as she often cooks grand feasts for seniors at the Westland Friendship Center. ANP photo by Ann Grimes/staff photographer

3 cups diced turkey
1 3/4 cups diced celery
3/4 cup diced almonds
1/2 cup shredded cheddar cheese

Break crackers into coarse crumbs. Toss with paprika. Set aside. In a large bowl mix lemon juice with onion, salt, pepper, and mayonnaise. Add turkey, celery, almonds, 1/2 cup of crumbs. Mix well. Turn into buttered shallow casserole dish. Sprinkle remaining crumbs and cheese on top. Bake in preheated oven at 350 degrees for approximately 25 minutes. Cheese should be lightly browned.

The next recipe is from Helen Jacobs, of Belleville. The recipe is actually from her mother, who never threw anything away. The recipe serves 6 to 8 people.

Turkey carcass soup

For the stock:

Turkey carcass, meat broken into small pieces
2 medium onions, chopped
2 ribs of celery with leaves, diced
1/2 cup diced carrot
1/2 cup diced leek (optional)
1/2 cup diced turnip (optional)
1 clove garlic, minced
Dash of salt
Spice bouquet (two teaspoons)
Parsley, thyme leaves, bay Leaf wrapped in cheese cloth)

For the soup

2 tablespoons minced onion
1 clove minced garlic
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 cup diced carrot
1/2 cup diced celery
1/2 cup finely chopped mushrooms
1 1/2 tablespoons flour
6 to 7 cups stock
1 teaspoon margarine
Dash of salt
Dash of pepper
1 cup cooked barley or rice or
1/3 cup raw barley or rice
1 cup diced turkey meat
2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley or
1 teaspoon dried parsley flakes

Begin with stock. Combine stock ingredients in large pot. Simmer 2 to 3 hours.

Strain to skim off fat. Remove bones but save meat sticking to them. Discard leaves. In food processor, puree remaining vegetables. Save separately from meat stock.

Now, start making the soup. In large saucepan, saute onions and garlic in butter or margarine. Add carrots, celery and mushrooms. Heat and stir at medium heat 3 to 5 minutes. Add flour. Heat and stir 1 minute. Add turkey stock, margarine, salt, pepper and barley or rice. Bring to boil. Reduce heat. Partially cover sauce pan.

Simmer approximately 1 hour. Add diced turkey. The vegetables left from the stock may be added or saved for another recipe.

Turkey-broccoli casserole

4 ounces (3 cups) uncooked noodles
1 10-ounce package broccoli spears, frozen
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon dry mustard
1/8 teaspoon pepper
2 cups milk
1 cup processed cheddar cheese, shredded
3 cups turkey, cooked and diced

Cook noodles and broccoli as directed on packages. Drain. Melt butter or margarine. Stir in flour and seasonings. Add milk slowly. Cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Remove from heat. Add cheese and stir until melted. Dice broccoli stems. Leave flowerets whole.

Place noodles, broccoli stems and turkey in 8-by-8-by-2-inch baking dish. Pour cheese over ingredients in baking dish. Arrange broccoli flowerets on top, pressing them into sauce. Bake, uncovered, at 350 degrees for 25 minutes or until bubbly.

Turkey salad

3 cups turkey, cooked and diced
1 cup celery, chopped
1/4 cup sweet pickles, chopped
2 hard-boiled eggs, chopped
1/2 cup salad dressing, mayonnaise type
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon salt
6 lettuce leaves

Mix turkey, celery, pickles and eggs together lightly. Mix salad dressing, lemon juice and salt until smooth. Gently stir salad dressing into turkey mixture. Chill thoroughly. Serve on lettuce leaves.

Turkey gumbo soup

3 cups turkey or chicken broth
1/2 cup onion, chopped
1/4 cup celery, chopped
1 10-ounce package okra, cut, frozen
1 16-ounce can tomatoes
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1/4 cup rice, uncooked
2 cups turkey, cooked and diced

Heat broth to boiling. Add vegetables, seasonings, rice and turkey. Cover and cook slowly 15 minutes, until vegetables and rice are tender.

Crabmeat party appetizers

1 8-ounce package cream cheese, softened
1 6-ounce can crabmeat, well-drained, flaked
1/4 cup green onion slices
1 garlic clove, minced
6 egg roll wrappers, cut into quarters
1 egg, beaten

Combine cream cheese, crabmeat, onions and garlic. Mix well. Spoon 1 tablespoon cream cheese mixture onto center of each eggroll quarter. Brush edges of each quarter with egg. Bring the opposite corners of each quarter to center. Twist top.

Press edges to seal. Fry in deep, hot oil at 375 degrees for 2 minutes or until golden brown, turning over. Drain on paper towels. Serve with sweet and sour sauce, if desired.

Blue cheese spread

2 8-ounce packages cream cheese, softened
4 ounces blue cheese crumbles
1 teaspoon dried basil leaves, crushed
1/2 cup finely chopped walnuts, toasted

Combine cream cheese, blue cheese and basil, mixing at medium speed on electric mixer until well blended. Stir in walnuts. Chill. Serve with assorted crackers and bread slices.

Turkey-time tips

For turkey-makers who need a few words of advice from experts, a turkey hotline is available. The hotline is sponsored by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Staffed by home economists, the hotline is in operation weekdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. On Thanksgiving Day, the hotline hours are 8 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The hotline number is 1-800-535-4555.

Often-asked questions by hotline callers include the use and handling of leftovers. U.S. Department of Agriculture officials offering the following advice.

• After the turkey is cooked, you have two hours to serve it and refrigerate or freeze the leftovers. Bacteria and food poisoning are potential threats after the two-hour limit.

• It is important to take out all of the stuffing from the turkey as soon as you remove the bird from the oven. Extra stuffing can be kept in the oven at 200 degrees while eating, or it can be refrigerated.

• Large quantities of leftovers should be divided into smaller portions and stored in several small or shallow, covered containers. This allows the food to become colder more quickly.

• Leftover turkey remains edible in the refrigerator for three to four days. Stuffing and gravy should be used within one or two days. Bring leftover gravy to a rolling boil before serving.

• For longer storage, package items in freezer paper or heavy-duty aluminum foil and freeze them.

Frozen turkey, stuffing and gravy should be used within one month.

FUN FOR ALL

Holiday activities are reasons for the season

By THOMAS M. VARCIE

It is the season of magic and mystery. Of romance and style. Of glitter and glitz. Of holiday happiness.

What more perfect way could there be to celebrate all of those Christmas characteristics than to participate in one of several holiday activities offered in the area?

The holiday getaways listed below range from a holiday stage show and feast to a stroll through the Christmas of yesterday. All will reinforce the magic of the season and remind all that "Christmas time is here again."

Travel back into the 1800s at the Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village, where visitors can experience Christmas of the past, according to Margaret Johnson, spokeswoman.

"We'll be doing Christmas of the past. Every building in the village will be decorated as it was in its time," Johnson said.

For example, the Firestone farmhouse, which was brought from eastern Ohio, will be decorated as it was in the 1880s. In addition, a tree will be decorated, and food will be cooked as it was in the 19th century.

The Wright Brothers' home will feature a presentation of how the Wright family celebrated Christmas in 1903, in an urban setting.

In the General Store, children have the opportunity to play with toys from the 19th century. Of course, the toys are replicas of the originals, Johnson said.

Visitors can also visit the glass-blowing and pottery shops and witness how 19th-century glass and pottery items were made.

Weather permitting, horse-drawn sleigh rides are available. Rides are approximately 15 minutes in duration and cost $1.50.

"The theme this year is 'A Child's World of Christmas.' In the museum, to celebrate Christmas, we'll have a giant Christmas tree. We'll have a Santa Claus here for the kids to talk to. Puppets shows and cartoons will be presented for the kids. A wonderful toy train layout is going to be here, and we'll have a display of old-fashioned Christmas toys," Johnson explained.

The official Christmas season for the museum and village is Dec. 3 to 31. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., closed Christmas day and Thanksgiving days. Tickets are $9.50, $8.50 and $4.75.

■ The sight of Christmas might not be as apparent as the smell of the yuletide season at Meadowbrook Hall, on the campus of Oakland University, in Rochester.

For the 17th consecutive year, area florists will decorate the mansion for holiday travelers from throughout the U.S., according to Careena Aldrich, marketing and public relations director at Meadowbrook.

The annual "Christmas Walk" is set from Nov. 30 to Dec. 11. The walk features a tour of the exotic floral arrangements. The walks are given from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Nov. 30 and Dec. 5 and 9; 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Dec. 1, 2, 3, 4, 10 and 11. Tickets are $4, $6 and $8. Group rates are available.

■ History will be present at the Henry Ford Estate-Fair Lane, in Dearborn, during the holiday season. Visitors can enjoy the sights, sounds and tastes of the Renaissance period, according to Alice Cerniglia, program coordinator for the estate.

A huge Christmas tree awaits visitors to the Henry Ford Museum, in Dearborn. The tree is one of the many holiday ornaments at the museum. Special photo to ANP

The former home of Henry and Clara Ford, built in 1915, will feature elegant floral displays by 13 area florists. Christmas walking tours are available during the week and on weekends.

"The entire place will be decorated by local florists in the area. The theme this year is the Renaissance, and it will feature renaissance decorations and events," Cerniglia said.

Perhaps the largest event is the Dec. 9 winter holiday feast, featuring a complete renaissance-oriented gathering.

OH, CHRISTMAS TREE

Area cut-your-own farms offer 'the perfect tree'

By THOMAS M. VARCIE

Ah, the smell of the fresh, green Christmas tree fills the living room. Bulbs, lights and garland are strung on the thriving branches of the Christmas garden symbol.

An upbeat tune of Deck the Halls is heard in the background, as the joyous family analyzes the newly decorated tree. Finally, the four family members join in a chorus of Oh Christmas Tree, Oh Christmas Tree.

The tree, family members thought, was the best Christmas tree they had ever decorated. This was due, in part, to the fact that the tree was a family project, from cutting it down to decorating.

The popularity of cut-your-own Christmas trees is increasing each year, according to owners of Boughan's Xmas Tree Farm and Nursery, in Van Buren Township. The 132 acres of holiday evergreens mean more than 6,000 trees will be available to adorn area households this year.

Growing at the farm are scotch pinus, red pines, Austrian pines and blue spruces. The trees can be cut, while some can be uprooted, wrapped in burlap and replanted elsewhere.

Each year, hundreds of Christmas-tree hunters end up at Boughan's to experience the traditional method of "fetching the Christmas tree," according to Essie Boughan, wife of the owner, Ken.

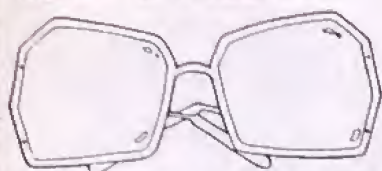

"The real Christmas tree is the thing we've had for hundreds of years. It's a tradition to get a real tree. And it's an experience to go out and cut your own tree. It's how the trees were taken in the past," Essie Boughan explained.

What makes people return to cut-your-own tree farms each year is the ability to pick "the perfect tree." The beauty and smell of a live tree are also great incentives, Boughan said.

Boughan's is the oldest of cut-your-own tree farms in lower Michigan. The business was started in 1951 by Ken's parents.

Growing the trees is a special art – and a year-round task, Boughan explained.

"We take a little break until about March. Then, we start to plant seeds when the ground thaws. As the trees grow, we straighten them out with a stake and make it nice and straight. Then, we start pruning," Boughan said.

The process of caring for the trees continues throughout the summer months. Trees are watered, and anti-disease or weed-control substances are applied near tree bases.

This tender-loving care continues until tree hunters appear early in November, although Thanksgiving weekend and the few weeks before Christmas are the busiest times.

Those wishing to cut their own tree this year, Boughan said, can expect heights of between 6 and 7 feet. Occasionally, an 8-foot beauty is available.

The trees can be cut as early as early November and remain fresh until Christmas, Boughan said.

Saws for cutting are generally provided at all tree farms. Tree prices at the Boughan farm are $18 for scotch, red and Austrian pines, $20 for a blue spruce tree and $55 for a tree that is uprooted and wrapped in burlap.

What follows is a list of cut-your-own Christmas tree farms in the western Wayne County area. Call each farm for prices, directions and availability of specific tree varieties.

Christmas stage shows bring stories to life

What's there to do when all the holiday shopping is done and the made-for-television Christmas specials aren't on?

One idea is to attend one of the many local theatre groups for a holiday play.

Sponsored by various area theatre groups, several plays will be staged this holiday season. Following is a list of plays offered.

■ A Christmas Carol, complete with Scrooge, eerie ghosts, Tiny Tim and the rest of the Charles Dickens characters, will be staged from Nov. 30 to Jan. 1 at Meadowbrook Theatre, on the campus of Oakland University, in Rochester. Tickets range from $12 to $21. Discounts for groups of 20 or more are available. Call 377-3300 for reservations.

■ A Christmas Carol will also be presented by the theatre group at Wayne State University, in the Bonstelle Theatre. Performances are Dec. 9 to 11 and 16 to 18. Tickets are $6 and $8. Group rates are available.

Charles Dickens' classic A Christmas Carol, featuring scenes of Christmas past, present (above) and future, will be performed at the Wayne State University Bonstelle Theatre this season.

This version of Dickens' classic will be staged in musical form.

Call 577-3010 for reservations.

■ Two holiday shows will be featured at the Detroit Youththeatre, in Detroit. Holiday Hoopla, with Sesame Street musical personality Eric Nagler, is a musical concert for children and their parents. Performances are at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. Dec. 3.

The Nutcracker, complete with puppeteer action, courtesy of Bob Brown Puppets, of Washington D.C., will be staged at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. Dec. 10, at the theatre. Tickets are $4. Discount rates for groups will apply.

Call 832-2731 for reservations.

■ The Greenfield Village Players, of Dearborn, will present the musical version of The Wizard of Oz Dec. 3 to 30. The 1904 classic, written by Frank L. Baum, is scheduled as the holiday play for the season. Tickets are $3.

Call 271-1620 for reservations.

■ The theatre group at the Marquis Theatre, in Northville, also plans to stage the musical version of The Wizard of Oz as the 1988 holiday play. The play is set for Dec. 2 to 30. Tickets are $6.50 and $8.50.

The theatre is located at 135 E. Main Street, downtown Northville. Call 349-8100 for reservations.

■ The famous Christmas play A Christmas Carol is set for 7:30 p.m. Dec. 2 at the First Presbyterian Church, Plymouth. Cost is $3. Call 453-6464.

■ The stage play A Wrinkle In Time will be presented Dec. 9, 10 and 11 in Quirk Theatre at Eastern Michigan University. Performances will be at 8 p.m. with a 2:30 p.m. slot for the Sunday matinee. Call 487-1221.

■ Members of the Merriman Road Baptist Church Choir will present "O Holy Night," at 7 p.m. Dec. 4 in the church auditorium, 2055 Merriman Road, Garden City. The performance will also be interpreted for the deaf and nursery. Call 421-0472.

Planning is the key for holiday parties

No doubt about it... It's time to celebrate and have a good time!

But how does one start?

People are constantly trying to determine how to make their party better than the last one they attended. Roz Stern, event planner at Toss A Party, in Farmington Hills, believes she has the answers.

"One of the best ways to make a great party is to plan it well. Coordination of a party is very important in the planning," Stern said. "Plan this out and know what your budget is."

The budget for a party, Stern said, is very important. Skimping in some areas is possible, but cost-cutting should never eliminate the elegance of the event.

"Most people know what their guests are like and know what kind of food and drinks and entertainment they like. They should do something to make their guests feel right," she said. "Plan out the food, which includes sweets and hors d'oeuvres, and know what they want to drink."

But planning isn't only food and spice and everything nice. Eating utensils, napkins and other holiday party accessories are very important.

"They should know what supplies they'll need. They need to know what plates to use, the kinds of napkins, decorations to be put out," she said.

"There's really a time frame involved. They have to plan it and sit down and figure all their needs out."

"Give yourself plenty of time, at least six weeks. Now, they're getting late in the season. Planning a party now, you might have to leave it simple - but elegant - or go to a professional planner," Stern continued.

The best time for a Christmas party is any time, Stern said.

"You can have a Christmas party anytime, and I really believe that. It's OK to have them earlier," she said.

To spice up the yuletide event, Stern suggests using balloons, which are more popular than ever.

"Balloons have become very sophisticated. There are balloon sculptures and balloon Christmas trees. They make the room really light up," she said.

In addition, lighted candles, fresh-flower arrangements and musicians playing always make impressive sights, Stern said. But, she added, color is an important factor in planning a Christmas party. Bright napkins or ribbons crisscrossing the table are classy frills. ■
